MRS. ELEANOR HOLM JARRETT

SWIM QUEEN PUNISHED FOR 'DRINKING PARTY'

Berlin, July 24 (AP)—Lovely Eleanor Holm Jarrett, fun-loving swimming ace, lost a frantic appeal for reinstatement on the American Olympic team today.

A sub-committee headed by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft of Princeton heard the swimmer's tearful plea as special trains carried the American team from Hamburg to Berlin but ruled the decision which dropped Mrs. Jarrett from the squad for repeated violation of training rules forbidding drinking and late hours must stand.

Warned previously for her participation in an all-night party in which one of her escorts was Charles MacArthur, playwright-husband of the actress Helen Hayes, Mrs. Jarrett drew down upon her head the wrath of the Olympic Committee by another escapade yesterday.

A number of non-Olympian passengers attended the party at which MacArthur was present. Miss Hayes did not attend.

PLEADS FOR CHANCE

Mrs. Jarrett admitted she had been drinking but said she had not realized "how seriously the offense would be regarded." She pleaded for another chance and promised she would "train and not touch another drop."

Despite the adverse decision by the sub-committee, Mrs. Jarrett is determined to fight on. Other members of the women's swimming team are circulating a petition asking the committee to give her another chance. The committee feels, however, that if it should yield in Mrs. Jarrett's case it would lose authority over the rest of the team.

The 22-year-old swimmer definitely balked at the Olympic committee's ruling that she return to the United States on the Bremen, sailing tomorrow. In order to catch the boat she would have to leave Berlin at midnight tonight.

U. S. SHIP BOMBED OFF SPAIN

Hammond Wills Millions to His 4 Children

Leaving an estimated $2,415,000 in Massachusetts properties alone, the will of John Hays Hammond, Gloucester inventor, was allowed for probate today in Salem Probate Court.

The Riggs National Bank of Washington, D. C., and two sons, Harris Hammond of Bordentown, N. J., and John Hays Hammond, Jr., of Gloucester, are named executors.

Each filed a bond of $3,300,000.

Of the Massachusetts estate—the world-wide estate is believed to total many millions—the bulk is left to the three Hammond sons and one daughter, the others being Richard P. Hammond and Natalie Hays Hammond, both of New York.

Bequests totaling about $50,000 are made to 25 servants, and there is comparatively little to go to charity.

The will states that considerable of the testator's property had been given to his children prior to his death.

It is also cloaked with an ironclad clause that should any of the beneficiaries contest the will, he or she loses the bequest.

President to Name U. S. Ship Board

Washington, July 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt was said today to be about ready to name the five-member Maritime Commission which will carry out the new ship subsidy law which replaces indirect ocean mail subsidies.

It was said in informed quarters that the Chief Executive would make the appointments soon after he returns to the Capital from his vacation.

Possible appointees, it was said, include Harllee Branch, second assistant postmaster-general in charge of ocean mail; Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the naval bureau of construction and repair; J. M. Johnson, assistant secretary of commerce; J. C. Peacock, of the shipping board bureau, and Joseph B. Weaver, director of marine inspection and navigation bureau. The jobs will pay $12,000 a year.

Killer Dies in Chair

Richmond, Va., July 24 (AP)—Thomas Cole Hart, who killed a guard and escaped a chain-gang in Scott County in 1932, died for the crime in the electric chair today after his mother's last desperate effort to obtain executive clemency had failed.

CURLEY ACTS TO CLEAN UP HOSPITAL

Declaring he found appalling conditions in a surprise investigation at the Boston State Hospital for mental patients in Mattapan this morning, Governor Curley demanded the discharge of the superintendent, Dr. James V. May.

"If Dr. Winfred Overholser, commissioner of mental diseases, declines to remove Dr. May, I shall demand Dr. Overholser's immediate resignation," said the governor.

The Governor described the conditions which he said he found, in part.

SEE NIGHTGOWNS

Going through several of the buildings housing hundreds of women patients between :30 and 9 o'clock this morning he said he observed:

That the patients are sharing nightgowns, being grouped by tens, each of the group having the nightgown for eight hours each 24.

That hundreds of the patients have no sheets to sleep on and as a result have huge body sores.

FOOD SHORTAGE

That the food is short, many of the patients being on half-rations to make it go around, according to hospital employes backed by the alleged corroboration of the steward, who blames a budget cash.

Gov. Curley encountered Dr. May during his round of the institution and there was a wordy clash. Later one of the superin-

LANDON HITS DEAL, MAPS CAMPAIGN

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kan., July 24—After accepting the Republican Presidential nomination with a "man to man" talk to the American electorate, that revealed his homely philosophy of good government, Governor Alfred M. Landon today began preparations for a militant campaign to capture the White House in November.

In tense, stirring sentences, Landon sounded a battle-cry to Republican hosts before an enthusiastically cheering crowd of 100,000.

He presented as his goal a well-administered government, keeping peace with the world, saving the taxpayer's money and offering every man and woman equal opportunity to gain a job, a home, reasonable security and the right to live according to the American tradition."

Landon will enlarge upon this message in personal tours of the country in the coming campaign. He planned a conference during the day with John D. M. Hamilton, vigorous G. O. P. national chairman, to begin drafting itineraries for his campaign tours.

WILL INVADE EAST

He will invade the east first and his initial speech probably will be at West Middlesex, Penn., his birthplace, about the third week of August.

The Governor was showered with congratulations on his address. Veteran Republican leaders here declared it had the "touch of Lincoln" in its homely philosophy. From every corner of the land came a flood of telegraphic commendations. Hundreds of messages were delivered to him before he retired and a huge batch awaited his early arrival this morning. All applauded him.

In accepting the nomination,

FR. COUGHLIN IN PHONE TALK WITH VATICAN

Vatican City, July 24 (AP)—A transatlantic telephone conversation between Father Charles E. Coughlin and Vatican officials aroused speculation today among prelates who acknowledged that the radio priest's "Liar" attack on President Roosevelt had created a "painful impression" here.

Whether the conversation, which a reliable source said took place last week, had anything to do with Father Coughlin's subsequent apology and promise to "obey orders" from the Vatican were be silenced, was not disclosed.

FR. COUGHLIN APOLOGIZES

(Father Coughlin yesterday made public the text of a public apology for terms he applied to the President at a convention of Townsend old age pension adherents recently, but declared later that he still deemed it best that the President "be supplanted.")

The prelates were said on excellent authority to be awaiting with utmost interest the arrival of Bishop Michael Gallagher of De-

They were taken to Worcester City Hospital, where Halliwey was reported to be unconscious and "very low." Johnson suffered a possible fracture of the skull.

Casablanca, French Morocco, July 24—The vivid story of an American liner's voyage of terror, with Spanish air bombs dropping off her bows as she fled the torches of rebels in Malaga, came today from the captain of the ship.

She was the American Export Line's Exmouth. (The line, in New York, identified the skipper as Captain Gustaf Berg of 124 Morris avenue, Summit, N. J.)

The captain, said he, alone counted the bodies of three men in the streets of Malaga who were machine-gunned for failing to give the Leftist salute.

"I was aboard my ship in Barcelona when a strike made all work of unloading impossible," said the skipper, who arrived from Malaga yesterday.

"Then I went to Valencia, where I again was unable to work because of the trouble. I therefore lifted anchor for Malaga.

"Upon arrival at Malaga, the pilot who came to conduct the ship to dock told me I could put in there.

LANDON'S SPEECH WINS WIDESPREAD APPROVAL

NOMINEE, HAMILTON MAP PLANS FOR NATIONAL TOUR

Landon spoke as an "everyday American" to his fellow citizens. He revealed himself a courageous militant leader, ready to smash at the weaknesses of the administration without indulging in vituperation, but preferring to campaign upon his own liberal program for improving living conditions for the average American.

There was even a hint in his speech of calling Independent Democrats into his Cabinet, if they are the right men to help him provide the best possible government for the people.

The Governor touched eight broad issues, before laying down a creed of good government. First, he criticized he New Deal for "careless thinking, unworkable laws and incompetent administration," and for "fumbling with recovery."

PLAN FOR RECOVERY

Then he proposed his own recovery program. He declared an end to "incessant governmental intimidation and hostility" toward business. He proposed relief for the unemployed and an amended workable social security act, free from political favoritism. He promised to put the federal "financial house in order" by husbanding its resources just as truly as does the head of a family."

For the farmer, he proposed restoring to him his lost American market, federal soil conservation and payments of benefits to help him market surplus crops that must be sold abroad in order to "protect their standard of living." For labor, he guaranteed the right to self organization and collective bargaining without interference from anybody.

In world affairs he promised to promote peace and help "drive the curse of war from the earth" but without entangling the United States in any unwanted conflict.

TORRENT OF NO, NO, NO

And lastly, he proposed constitutional government with changes in its form only by and through the people and not by usurpation." The 100,000 middle-westerners understood that issue and took it to their hearts.

Once when he asked the rhetorical question:

"Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the chief executive?" he was interrupted by a mighty torrent of "No, no, no," and when he continued with: "Or do we desire to preserve the American form of government?" a roar of "ayes" went up to the stars.

U. S. Steamer Rams Ship, Saves Crew

The American vessel rescued the entire crew of the Bjornvik. The Cliffwood was en route to Copenhagen from New York.

GULESIAN OUT FOR SENATE

More opposition to Governor Curley in his race for the U. S. Senate—and for that matter, by Representative Henry Cabot Lodge—crystallized today.

Moses H. Gulesian of Newton, onetime wealthy realtor, filed nomination papers in Boston City Hall as an Old Townsend Party candidate for the Senate.

Gulesian had 580 signatures on his papers. He needs to have 250 signatures certified in each of four counties in the state to go on the November ballot.

This development came on the heels of the announced contest of Mayor Robert E. Greenwood of Fitchburg for senatorial honors, both as a Democrat in the primaries, and as an independent in the final election.

Glen Richardson, state director of the Townsenders, said that the old age pension backers would not commit themselves on Gulesian's candidacy as yet.

He declared that Attorney George Gray of Greenfield was also a possible Townsend candidate for the Senate, and until the 245 clubs had made up their minds whether to favor Gulesian or Grey, no definite Townsend indorsement would be made.

Roosevelt Silent On Landon Speech

Aboard Schooner Liberty, Yarmouth, N. S., July 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt, awaiting favorable weather today before cruising westward to Grand Manan island on the final lap of his vacation cruise, made no comment on the acceptance speech of Governor Alf M. Landon, his Republican opponent.

The President heard the address over the radio last night after he had spent a day in fruitless search for tuna in the lower Bay of Fundy. He was aboard his vacation schooner, Sewanna, again.

There was no comment from the President when he was informed of the published apology of the Reverend Charles E. Coughlin for referring to Mr. Roosevelt as "a liar."

Associates of the sailing Roosevelts said a motor run up the western Nova Scotian coast to Digby was likely if the wind failed. Otherwise, the escort vessels, the destroyer Houkins and the U. S. S. Potomac, had orders to get underway for the Grand Manan island

G. O. P. LEADERS MAP TOUR

Farmington, July 24—A speech-making and organization schedule, which is regarded as the most intensive so far planned for the Maine Republican campaigners in their State-wide whirlwind tour, is listed for Franklin County Friday and Saturday when the G. O. P. leaders and candidates will visit nearly 20 towns.

Officers of the county committee have completed details for carrying out what they intend to be elaborate programs at rallies in various sections of the county during the two-day tour by the campaigners, who are scheduled to take part in 10 speaking engagements.

Band concerts will precede several of the rallies, according to plans made by the county Republican leaders, who said today they expect to have a very large attendance seen at political gatherings in the county for several years.

The campaigners started their tour of Franklin County by staging a speaking meeting in New Vineyard at 9 o'clock, followed by a similar meeting in Strong at 10 o'clock. There were two organization meetings in Freemen at 10:30 and Salem at 11. Arriving in Kingfield at 11:30, the group had lunch and spoke to voters at 12:30.

Another speaking meeting was staged at Phillips and Avon in the afternoon at 2, followed by organization work at Madrid at 3. Several plantations were visited between 3:30 and 4:30. At 5 o'clock there was speech-making in Stratton.

The first day's tour was concluded by a public supper at 6:30 and a rally at 8 in Rangeley.

Starting with an organization meeting at Industry Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, the G. O. P. group will have a speaking engagement in New Sharon at 10 and then go to Chesterville for organization work at 11.

A luncheon and speaking program is scheduled for 1 o'clock in Weld. In the afternoon the group will go to Carthage for organization work at 3 and speech-making in Wilton at 3.

KNOX PRAISES LANDON TALK

Colonel Frank Knox, Republican Vice-Presidential nominee, commenting on the acceptance speech of Governor Alfred Mossman Landon of Kansas and Republican candidate for President of the United States, last night, said:

"Governor Landon's speech was a splendid presentation of the principles of simplicity, honesty and economy in government, which are the principles so badly needed at this time in the administration of the nation's affairs.

"It was, at the same time, a demonstration of the fine quality of character in the Presidential candidate himself. He revealed the rugged honesty, the quiet determination, the warm sympathy of Landon as a man. It was just what the country expected. No fireworks, no fancy phrases, no pretense, no belief that upon him alone the future welfare of the country depended.

"Undoubtedly, the people will see in this address and in this man, the order and efficiency that the Republican party stands for."

Curley Pays Visit To Insane Ward

tendent's staff followed the Governor into a building only to be ordered "on his way" by the chief executive.

The visit, which took all the hospital employes and Dr. May as well, entirely by surprise, was in part a result of the disclosure of revels at the institution recently.

GIVES REPORTS

The Governor said, as long as six weeks ago, he had received reports of the conditions he said he found today, and had put the matter up to Commissioner Overholser.

The latter denied that the conditions existed and asserted he had sufficient funds to work with, according to the Governor.

Governor Curley said he entered Building B-1 in the west wing of the hospital, alone, at 8:30 this morning, simply saying to the first attendant he met:

"I am Governor Curley and I want to take a look around."

In that structure he said he found there were no sheets or pillow cases and generally unsanitary conditions. He said the kitchens he visited were for the most part dirty, the sinks slimy and the iceboxes odorous.

MANY COMPLAINTS

"All the patients were complaining about the food and their stories were fully confirmed by employes," he said. "Many of the patients recognized me, wrung my hand and asked me to do something about it."

He said he was amazed to find a shortage not only of sheets but of nightgowns and added that he personally saw the sores which some patients had suffered as a result of contact with the mattresses.

"One supervisor told me there wasn't a towel in the entire building of which she had charge," said the Governor.

"I saw one girl in a straitjacket with no clothing at all under it and a mattress covered with oil cloth to lie on. The attendant said there were no sheets. This patient was covered with no cover.

"I also noted the lack of sprinklers in wooden buildings with barred windows."

ARCHES BROKE DOWN

"How long since you visited these buildings?" asked the governor.

"I went into them every day until my arches went back on me, 18 months ago," was the reply.

The Governor said he had told Dr. Overholser that if he needed funds to improve conditions, he would see that they were provided, but he said the commissioner denied the conditions existed.

He quoted Henry Franks, hospital steward, as blaming a budget cut from $250,000 to $196,000 for food. Franks, according to the Governor, said he was allowed one cent a pound for potatoes but had to pay four cents, and was $483 over his potato allowance already.

YOUTH SWING MAINE TO G. O. P. LINEUP

Topeka, Kan., July 24 (US)—Republican women leaders who attended the Landon notification ceremonies today declared themselves equipped with ammunition for the drive to oust the "New Dealers" from Washington. Here are views given by some of them to Universal Service:

Mrs. Chris. Carlson, committeewoman from Minnesota:

"If we are to have a good, sound government, everyone must vote the Republican ticket. We plan to carry Minnesota."

Mrs. John Wyath, committeewoman from Missouri, and mother of four children:

"The economic and political future of our children is at stake. Unless we continue in the Republican path, all we've accomplished is for naught. Unless spending is curtailed speedily, we will saddle our children with tremendous debt."

MEETS NEEDS

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, of West Virginia:

"We have a candidate who perfectly meets the needs of the times and one to whom the country is naturally turning with confidence."

Mrs. V. E. Stenerson, of North Dakota:

"The present as well as the future welfare of the country demands the Republican party. Lack of appreciation of money now may result in trouble for future generations."

Mrs. Paul Tillinghammons, committee-woman from Rhode Island:

"The Republican party promises more business in government and less government in business. I'm convinced Governor Landon is sound, practical, and knows the true American viewpoint."

PRESERVE SYSTEM

Mrs. Katharine Kennedy Brown of Ohio:

"We must first preserve the American system of government. All other issues are subsidiary."

Bertha Bauer, committee-woman from Illinois and candidate for Congress:

"The Republican way is the way to prosperity for everyone on a sound, economical basis. We are organizing and educating the women of our state to realize this need for now and for our children's future."

KEEP STANDARDS

Mrs. Lulah K. Andrews, former vice-chairman of the Nebraska Republican state committee:

"The election of the Republican ticket is the only way to perpetuate the American form of government, the supreme court and the American ideals and standards of living."

Mrs. Ophelia Dorrois, of Colorado Springs, Col.:

Today's Boon-Doggle

Since July 1, when its new $1,425,000,000 boon-doggling fund became available to it, the Works Progress Administration has been operating under a new set of rules, designed apparently to enable it to spend as much of its money as possible before election day.

The old rules under which it operated up to July 1 were found to have hampered its prodigality painfully in some communities, among which was Prince George's County, Maryland.

Just before the new order was established, Works Progress Administration project supervisor M. H. Davis of Prince George's county announced that a serious labor shortage there would prevent his office from starting work on $600,000 worth of projects that were otherwise all ready to go.

Estimating that demands for construction workers in this section had mounted to pre-depression levels, Mr. Davis declared that all eligible employables had already been hired, and that there was nothing he could do not to postpone indefinitely the starting of work on these new projects.

As explained by Works Progress Administration officials in Washington today, however, the new rules would change all that. Formerly all but 10 per cent of the Works Progress Administration workers had to be taken from relief rolls; now any "needy" person may be hired.

Formerly Works Progress Administration workers had to take a "pauper's oath;" now the oath is no longer required. Once workers were paid "security wages;" now they will receive "prevailing wages," which will doubtless induce many to quit work in private enterprise and find nice, soft berths for themselves on the government work-relief pay rolls.

Clearly Mr. Davis' troubles are over, and clearly, too, America has gone on a permanent dole.

Straw Vote Trend

Republicans Pile Up New Leads

MASSACHUSETTS

Once again, the Republican candidates in Massachusetts for United States Senate and for governor pulled away from their Democratic rivals as the 10th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot ended.

The towns of Marlboro, Framingham, Sudbury and Natick all aided in widening the gaps between Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican aspirant to the Senate, and Governor Curley, the Democratic opponent, and between John W. Haigis, Republican candidate for governor, and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley.

HERE IS STANDING

For United States Senate:

Lodge	3044
Curley	1634

For Governor:

Haigis	3230
Hurley	1635

Thus far in the race, Lodge has picked up nearly a 2 to 1 lead over Governor Curley, while Haigis is but 11 votes short of being exactly 2 to 1 over Hurley.

LODGE KEEPS LEAD

On the 10th day of sounding out the sentiment in Massachusetts cities and towns, Marlboro gave Lodge 58 votes to 43 for Curley, and Haigis 53 votes to 47 for Hurley.

Framingham returned 70 for Lodge, 61 for Curley, 63 for Haigis, 56 for Hurley; Sudbury returns showed 53 for Lodge, 27 for Curley, 30 for Haigis and 31 for Hurley, while Natick gave Lodge 66, Curley 47, Haigis 59 and Hurley 58.

Results of the straw ballot are printed daily in the Boston Evening American and on each Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Watch for them.

MAINE

Continuing their sweep in Maine, Republican candidates for United States Senate and the governorship picked up further gains during the 10th day of the Boston Evening American-Sundhy Advertiser straw ballot.

Four towns—Enfield, Lee, Lincoln and Millinocket—were covered during the 10th day of sounding out the political sentiment in Maine, and again the Democratic-New Deal aspirants were set back for losses.

WRITE IN SPURT

Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., Republican candidate for the Senate, picked up a total of 18 votes for the day over Governor Brann, his Democratic opponent, while C. Barrows, Republican candidate for governor, gained a total of 114 over F. Harold Dubord, Democrat.

For United States Senate:

White	1937

For Governor:

Barrows	2448
Dubord	1136

G. O. P. AHEAD

During this 10th day of the straw ballot, Enfield gave 6 votes to White, 4 to Brann, 5 to Barrows and 2 to Dubord; Lee gave White 7, Brann 3, Barrows 8, Dubord 2; Lincoln gave White 36, Brann 26, Barrows 43 and Dubord 30, while Millinocket showed 64 for White, 61 for Brann, 94 for Barrows and 31 for Dubord.

Quins Play in 'Showcase'

Crowds Never Bother Them

GLASS AND SCREEN PROTECT THEM

VISITORS SNAP MANY PICTURES

The sixth article of a new and astonishing series of hitherto unpublished revelations of the battle of governmental Big Business and the parents for control of the Dionne quintuplets is related today by Win Brooks of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser staffs. Mr. Brooks has already told of the millions of dollars of profits made by the province of Ontario by its public exhibitions of the children; today he tells how 3000 to 4000 daily visitors get first peek at Quins.

By WIN BROOKS
Staff Correspondent, Boston Evening American

Callander, Ont., July 24—A strange and interesting study is the tourist in a foreign land, none stranger, none more interesting than the 3000 to 4000 who roll in here daily to peek at the Dionne quintuplets placed on exhibition by the government.

Among them are bankers, busmen, philanthropists and philanderers, members of the clergy, statesmen, housewives, business women, college students, children of all types.

The women come in Fifth avenue frocks and gowns, sports wear, shorts, bathing suits, many of them in sun helmets. Shorts and blouses are a favorite costume with them, especially, it seems, with those who, for one reason or another, do not appear to best advantage in shorts.

Many of them are on hand at 9 a. m. to get an early glimpse of the Quins walking with Nurse Leroux from the hospital to the playground, a distance of about 150 feet, beyond the heavy wire fence.

This was, until the recent opening of the new playground, the closest the crowd was permitted to come to the children.

During the half hour that the children are in the playground before the doors are opened to the public, the swelling throng roams the countryside taking pictures—nearly all have cameras—gathering in little groups outside the shuttered home of Pere and Mere Dionne, shopping at one or another of the refreshment and souvenir stands.

The big truck, carting dirt for the unfinished playground slope, says "L. Dionne" on its side. This is Leo Dionne, uncle of the Quins, who conducts a garage and information bureau in Callander.

From the Indian-blankets stand down the road comes the mobile unit of a good business, the cart loaded with pennants, leather and felt souvenirs, postcards, tonic, to take up its stand on a little rise of ground between the playground entrance gate and Madam Legros' homestead, much to the dismay of P. Adams, proprietor of the Midwives' stand across the road.

Three two-wheeled carts, each drawn by a steer driven by boys, come rumbling down the lane between the parked cars and also take a stand beside the entrance to the playground.

The reason for these is almost immediately apparent. The tourists buzz around to take pictures. Some just take pictures of the carts and boys, some take pictures of their tourist companions in the carts or astride the steers. The boys, courteous and unsolicitating, do well financially in tips. One of the steers is a little steer and it is most in demand. The visiting ladies think it is "awfully cute."

A few minutes before the scheduled opening of the gates there is a concentration of the crowd outside them so that when the gates are finally opened, promptly at 9:30, a lineup extends for a long distance outside the fence.

Except that there are more children in it, nibbling ice cream cones and sucking on tonic bottle straws, it is just such an early crowd as may be found waiting outside the gates of a ball park where a World Series game is scheduled.

Constable Elmer Shepard moves from his outside post to a position inside the fence, the three special guards take up their places inside the playground and Stewart Cline, superintendent of construction, gives the word that all is ready. The gates are opened.

Behind Screen

The crowd buzzes and squeals in anticipation, moving slowly, orderly, behind Constable Shepard to the playground doors which have been flung back.

There are located two turnstiles with an automatic counting arrangement that tallies the visitors. These have just been installed.

The crowd presses through the turnstiles and discovers an area way facing the playground. It is about 10 feet wide. On the outside of it is the blank outer wall of the octagonal building; on the inside of it is plate glass beyond which is a fine mesh screen, painted platinum.

At this particular spot the windows have been painted so that it is impossible to see through them. This was done to avoid congestion at the entrance.

The crowd splits, following in both directions along the areaway and comes presently to the unpainted section of the windows and the first view of the Dionne quintuplets in their playground.

"Oh!" and "Ah!" and "Look-looks" are immediately voiced.

"Please be silent," warns a guard.

At one end of the grass plot is a built-in sandbox of huge dimensions. At the other end, near the private entrance from the hospital, is a concrete bathing pool in which are several inches of water.

Between the pool and the sandbox stands what appears to be a miniature fire warden tower. It is a gymnasium exerciser with a ladder arrangement on four sides for climbing.

The crowd presses close to the windows, noses flattened along the glass, whispering excitedly. The window screen arrangement is such that the children are clearly visible through a white film, but the crowd is invisible to the children.

The Quins are, and give every indication of being, utterly oblivious of the fact that anyone except Nurse Leroux is watching them. There is no self-consciousness about any of them.

"The one in green is Marie."

"No, I don't think so, I think the one in red is Marie."

"Guard, I wonder if you will tell us which is Marie?"

"Quiet, please," "Keep moving."

The turnstiles have been locked, waiting upon the first batch of visitors to pass through, avoiding congestion within.

Yvonne splashes in the pool. She looks as stalwartly healthy as any child could be. Her face and little back, exposed to the sunlight here—there is no roof on the playground proper— are as brown as mahogany. The others are the same.

Yvonne retrieves the ball, wades with it to the pool edge and rolls it out on the stone.

The crowd roars.

The guard calls:

"Here, here, here, now! None of that! There must be absolute silence. It must not happen again."

Another guard says:

Those who have taken the left areaway find themselves all too soon at an exit at the front of the playground; those who have gone the other way leave the building from a door in the rear.

Many have come hundreds, some have come thousands of miles to see the Quins, and are disappointed only in that the view is all too short.

Many Remain

Yvonne climbs out first, the others follow, Marie returning to the water to retrieve the ball for Nurse Leroux, who cannot reach it from the edge of the pool and is not equipped with a boat hook.

Soon all of them are climbing the gymnasium tower, sure-footed and without fear.

It took them only one example to learn what the tower was for. The day it was first installed the nurse took two steps up the rungs while the Quins clustered around. Then she stepped back and Marie stepped forward, began to climb. Marie fell off, got up without a whimper, climbed again. In no time they were all at it.

When the visiting hour is over, many of the tourists remain to catch a last glimpse of the children being led up the little slope from the playground to the hospital.

Almost all of the women visitors, many of the men, take a stone away from the place as souvenir or token.

It is an old belief that a stone taken from the land of those blessed with children is conducive to parenthood.

The legend became so widespread in Quintuplet Land that the guardians set up three specially built boxes of stones at the main exit from the playground. No sign is necessary to inform the tourists what they are and their availability stops visitors from attempting to wander all over the premises picking up stones.

Not a few of the visitors snatch them surreptitiously; everybody is a little self-conscious; there is much giggling.

Cecile

Win Brooks today tells you of how the playful Quins amuse the hundreds and hundreds of visitors during the visiting hour. Nurse Leroux enters into their play hour with the spirit of play and a lot of protection. There are snickers and sometimes loud laughter from the visitors. This, however, is discouraged.

Lindy's Talk Hailed by Germans

Berlin, July 24 (AP)—German aviation and political circles reacted favorably today to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's warning against aerial warfare.

The unexpected frankness of the American aviator in discussing the imminence of war in Europe at a luncheon in his honor yesterday was almost universally praised.

Dr. Hans H. Dieckhoff, in charge of American affairs at the German foreign office, said he regarded "Lindbergh's philosophical address as one of the greatest short speeches ever written."

A leading German aviator, who requested that his name bew ithheld, said:

"No aviator has so tersely expressed what we all feel as your American colonel did."

Colonel Lindbergh astonished his luncheon hosts with the assertion that aviation had "abolished what we call defensive warfare" and had turned "defense into attack."

He then added this warning:

"We can no longer protect our families with an army. Our libraries, our museums and every one of the institutions we value most are laid bare to bombardments."

Major Truman Smith, the United States military attache who has Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh as his house guests, said:

"Lindbergh began writing the speech Wednesday at our home after supper. The next morning he went over it once more, then read it to me. I knew at that time that it would ring the bell."

Lindbergh limited himself to a brief "Thank you" in return for German hospitality today.

He was welcomed by the Richthofen Air Squadron and had luncheon with its officers at their Doeberitz mess after inspecting modern aircraft engines of war and seeing German army fliers perform in the air.

10 Routed by Fire In Somerville

Ten persons were awakened and fled their apartments at 75 Ten Hills road, Somerville, today, when fire broke out in a second floor bedroom of the two-and-one-half story house.

Patrolmen John K. Barrett and Walter McRae, on cruiser car duty, discovered the blaze. McRae sounded the alarm. Barrett roused the residents. Damage was slight, due to the speedy action of police.

Missing Man Found

Littleton, N. H., July 24—Missing from home since last spring, Thomas W. Aldrich was located here today working on a dam construction project. On completion of the job he plans to return to his wife in Center Ossipee, he said today.

New Traffic Snarl Lasts 45 Minutes

Traffic entering Boston from the north was tied up for more than 45 minutes today in one of the worst morning rush hours traffic jams since the Christmas holidays.

The tangle extended from Dock square to the two Charlestown bridges, chiefly at the new traffic circle in Haymarket square.

Officials at the traffic bureau blamed the tangle on the rainy weather and the influx of motorists on shopping trips, anticipating the closing of the stores tomorrow.

TREASON TRIAL FOR KING'S ASSAILANT

CONSTABLE HERO TELLS STORY

London, July 24 (AP)—England's hero constable, Anthony Gordon Dick, told a Bow Street Police Court trial today how he smashed at the pistol hand of George Andrew McMahon when King Edward rode by on Constitution Hill a week ago Thursday.

The hand had an "object" in it, the constable said.

Other testimony identified the "object" as a loaded pistol which clattered at the feet of the King's horse.

He was remanded to jail for a week after the hearing on a charge of producing a weapon "with intent to alarm his majesty."

The decision to grant a remand pending continuance of the hearing next Friday was made after Alfred Kerstein, counsel for the prison, had announced McMahon wishes to testify himself and to call witnesses.

Attorney General Sir Donald Somervell, in charge of the prosecution, quoted the prisoner as telling the police.

CHARGES OUTLINED

Said Sir Donald:

"The first offense with which this man is charged is presenting near the person of His Majesty a revolver with intent to break the public peace; the second with producing a revolver near the person of His Majesty with intent to alarm His Majesty."

These charges, he said, were in addition to that of being in possession of a revolver with intent to endanger life.

Judge Sir Rollo Graham Campbell told him:

"You can sit down if you like."

The attorney-general said the prisoner had told the police, "I wish I had done the job properly; that he also said, "I could easily have shot him;" and that subsequently he said, "It would have been better if I had shot myself."

CONSTABLE LAUDED

He said that as the King reached a point about 20 yards from McMahon, Dick saw the prisoner raise his arm with something in his hand. Dashed Dick knocked the prisoner's arm and an object "left his hand and travelled some distance into the middle or near the middle of the road; the object was a revolver."

Reviewing the events of July 16, Somervell stated a mounted policeman stopped his horse in front of McMahon as the King approached. He said McMahon shouted:

"Take your damn horse away, I want to see the procession!"

The policeman turned his horse to face the procession as it came through the arch on Constitution Hill.

Afterward, he said, McMahon was seen to write on a newspaper. The paper later was picked up and the message was: "May I love you?" Somervell said it apparently was a message for McMahon's wife.

BARMAID'S STORY

The first witness, Marie Blencowe, a barmaid, said McMahon came to the "Two Brewers" pub "as usual" the day before the incident and told her:

"I am going away; you'll never see me again."

John William Remes, an eyewitness at Constitution Hill, said he first saw McMahon when the latter asked a constable to move. He did not see the revolver.

"The first thing I heard," said Remes, "was someone– I think it was my wife—saying, 'An insult to the King!' I pushed my way through the crowd and saw the prisoner in the arms of a policeman. As they turned him around, I said, 'You swine!' and struck him."

Mrs. Lily Yeoman testified she stood in the front row of spectators, in front of McMahon.

When the King rode by, she told the court, "a man pushed forward, pushing me to one side by spreading his arms.

SUSPECTED BOMB

She looked at the King, then glanced about and saw McMahon in a stooping position.

"I thought it must be a bomb being thrown," she said. "Then someone rushed to the left-hand side of the prisoner and got hold of his left arm. I saw an object leaving his right hand, I followed it with my eyes and saw it touch the horse."

"Whose horse?" asked the prosecutor.

"His majesty's horse," the witness replied.

"I could see then it was a revolver," she added. "I asked a policeman at my side if it was a toy one.

Throughout the testimony the prisoner made copious notes.

U. S. SWIM QUEEN'S OUSTER STANDS DESPITE TEARS

adlet was not clear. It was pointed out that Mrs. Jarrett is an American citizen with her passport and visa in order and thus free to go where she pleases.

Mrs. Jarrett won the right to a hearing on the train en route to Berlin only after a struggle.

The swimmer, broken up by the committee's drastic action last night asked Olympic officials not to "ruin my life," was conceded the opportunity of telling her story by Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft after Avery Brundage, A. O. C. president, finally turned down her appeal.

Mrs. Jarrett was dropped from the team just before the Olympic ship Manhattan reached Hamburg. She was ordered to turn in her uniform and equipment and return to America on the Bremen, sailing tomorrow. Her entry in the 100 meters backstroke, in which she was a top-heavy favorite to retain the Olympic title she captured in 1932, was withdrawn.

AWAKENED FOR VERDICT

Accompanied by Herb Holm, manager of the women's swimming team, Mrs. Jarrett carried her appeal to Brundage, Frederick Rubien, secretary of the committee, and finally to Dr. Raycroft after waking up on a rainy, cheerless "morning after the night before" to hear the bad news.

Mrs. Jarrett had been sound asleep when the committee came to its decision after an hour's meeting.

All told her the decision had been taken regretfully only after long deliberation. There had been no choice, the officials said, to do otherwise in view of what they called her repeated misbehavior and violation of all warnings.

In response to the swimmer's pleading, Brundage said:

"We gave you every chance. You have only yourself to blame. Now you've got to take it. I appreciate how you feel, but you forced our hand, and we had no alternative. I can tell you the committee's mind definitely is made up."

"ON SPOT NOW"

"I know I have been drinking too much and I'm all wrong," Mrs. Jarrett told Dr. Raycroft. "I can't put into words how badly I feel now. All I am asking is a chance to face the committee and tell them, on my word of honor, that I did not realize how seriously the offense would be regarded.

"I've been night-clubbing and having a good time for the last three years, always doing as I pleased, going where I liked, drinking what I wanted and when I wanted.

"The night before the final tryouts I was up all night, but I won my race the next day.

"Nobody ever told me that was all wrong but it was my fault that I didn't realize that circumstances were different on an Olympic trip.

"I'm on the spot now. I feel like jumping overboard but will train and not touch another drop if I'm given another chance."

Dr. Raycroft, who has a daughter of about the swimmer's age, talked to Mrs. Jarrett in fatherly fashion but told her he saw no prospect of the committee changing its mind.

PROMISES HEARING

He agreed, however, it would only be fair to give her a hearing despite the difficulties involved in the last-minute hustle of getting the team off the boat and onto trains for Berlin.

Dr. Raycroft authorized arrangements for taking Mrs. Jarrett along to Berlin.

"Can I wear my uniform, doctor?" the swimmer pleaded.

"You unable to authorize that now," he replied, "but I am willing to take the responsibility for giving your a hearing."

"What you don't realize, Eleanor," Dr. Raycroft continued, "is that your case is not just your own affair but has affected the entire team and reflected on us all.

"Your friends tried in every way to convince you that good behavior was essential if you wanted to remain on the team, but you openly flaunted their judgment as well as our authority."

It was disclosed that vain attempts were made to keep Mrs. Jarrett below decks last evening after the stateroom party had continued for hours. She insisted on coming up and bumped into chaperone Ada Taylor Sackett of Atlantic City, N. J. who hustled Eleanor below.

Other officials witnessed the episode, promptly went into executive session and voted unanimously to take the unprecedented action of dismissing a champion from the team.

The "Jarrett case," which began with a cocktail party last Friday and developed reverberations reaching a climax just before the Olympic ship docked, overshadowed the morning's developments including an impressive civic welcome.

A steady drizzle failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the reception. A police band played the German and American anthems and representatives of the Hamburg Senate extended greetings. Brundage replied on behalf of the athletes and the entire Olympic party then was taken by buses to city hall for additional greetings.

CREATES FURORE

Mrs. Jarrett's dismissal, due to a combination of late hours and drinking, created a furore among Olympic team members who have been in a turmoil ever since the first outbreak.

She was a storm center among the athletes because of the possible spread of the impression that her actions typified the team's general behavior.

Brundage's statement Wednesday implying, without mentioning any names, that she was the sole serious offender so far as violation of training rules was concerned, was designed to mollify the rest of the team.

Prior to last Saturday's warning, Mrs. Jarrett had declared she liked to imbibe and enjoy the relaxation of party life and intended to do so regardless of what the officials might think.

Waving her hand to all listeners and lifting a glass of sparkling beverage, she declared:

"This is the way I'm accustomed to train and I don't see why I should change my habits now."

Mrs. Jarrett, attended by a nurse, Katherine Roche, accompanied the athletes to the Rathaus—town hall—for the formal exchange of speeches by Mayor Vincent Krogmann and Brundage but appeared dejected throughout the proceedings. The swimmer boarded the train hoping against hope that the committee would reverse its decision.

She said, flatly, she would not return to the United States on the Bremen but doesn't know what she will do if kept off the team. Officials of the United States lines had declined previously to undertake the responsibility of delivering Mrs. Jarrett aboard the Bremen.

Officials pointed out that Mrs. Jarrett was an American citizen, with passport and visa in good order, and entitled to do as she pleases.

Ceremonies at the Rathaus were marked by a renewal of the old German custom of serving sherry wine as a seal of friendship. The athletes, Mrs. Jarrett notably excepted, partook of the ceremonial wine together with officials.

In response to Hamburg's warm greeting, Brundage replied:

"We are happy to terminate our voyage in an ancient city with which Americans have many ties. We are anticipating the greatest Olympic games ever held. We expect keen competition and welcome it."

Police held back thousands outside the Rathaus. All streets and business establishments were gaily decorated with Olympic and Nazi colors.

Eleanor's Husband Disappointed at Star's Ouster

New York, July 24 (AP)—Art Jarrett, band leader husband of Eleanor Holm Jarrett, said he was greatly "disappointed" today that American Olympic officials had barred his wife from the Olympic swimming team.

"It may have been necessary for the morale of the team," he said, at the Long Island country club where he is vacationing, "but it means the loss of the best swimmer on the team."

"Eleanor isn't a 16-year-old any more. She's been around long enough to know how to handle herself. She always seems able to win even if she doesn't go in for the heavy training of some of those athletes."

DEFENDS DRINKING

Jarrett said he saw nothing wrong in his wife's drinking champagne if she wanted.

ARTHUR JARRETT

Maybe they could win a couple races."

Jarrett said he had not heard from his wife since she had been ordered from the team. He said he would cable her today as soon as he learned all the details of her dismissal.

"Of course, I'm greatly disappointed that Eleanor will not get a chance at her third Olympics," he continued. "I'm sure she would have won again without any trouble."

ARMS OPEN FOR WIFE

The orchestra leader said if his wife returns on the liner Brazil, as indicated in Hamburg dispatches, he will be waiting to greet her "with open arms."

Jarrett, who was married to the attractive swimming star in September, 1933, said he had no criticism of the American Olympic officials for taking the action against his wife "if they felt it was necessary."

Asked whether he thought the dismissal was justified Jarrett replied:

"Well, those fellows have a job on their hands taking care of that Olympic crowd. I don't know whether they were right or not."

On and Under

Point Pleasant, N. J., July 24 (AP)—The Borough Council has billed the state highway commissioner $50 for "cooling off" the Bay Head – Manasquan canal bridge. The Bascule draw span bulged during the heat wave and wouldn't work.

Confronted with a traffic jam, local authorities poured $50 worth of water on the bridge to get it into operation.

SPANISH BOMB U. S. BOAT, CAPTAIN BARES TERRORS

troubles, but no danger for foreigners.

"At the dock, I got off to go to the company's office and the consulate, but on the way found in the deserted streets first one body, then a second, then a third.

"I started to turn around when Reds in automobiles, flying the red flag, passed near me and fired a machine gun.

"Then I learned that all who failed to raise their fists in salute when automobiles with red flags passed were killed with machine guns.

"I saw people pushing automobiles off the dock into the water.

"I started to go aboard when I heard several groups of revolutionaries near me say: 'Suppose we set fire to this boat.'

"I did not wait any longer. I lifted anchor for Casablanca.

"But my troubles were not over.

"Passing through the Straits of Gibraltar, I saw a Spanish plane coming toward me.

"Luckily they fell about a hundred yards ahead of the steamer's bow.

"I reported immediately by radio to the American consulates in Gibraltar, Tangier and Casablanca.

"Finally I arrived here."

U. S. Writer Fled Spain Rioting

Perpignan, France, July 24 (AP)—Margaret Culkin Banning, Duluth, Minn., novelist, told today of fleeing from San Sebastian, Spain, with her two children after the revolt started there Sunday.

"The first sign of something wrong in San Sebastian was when the hotel employes became sullen Saturday," she said. "We were awakened at 5:30 Sunday morning by the manager battering on the door and telling us to close the shutters as shooting had begun.

"Things quieted later and we went to church. Suddenly the rabble burst in. We saw soldiers yelling for us to get under the seats.

"I got up, took my son and daughter and a soldier let us through a side door.

"We decided to make a break that night. We got our car after some trouble and reached the border just before dark. W were stopped five times at barricades and searched, but only for guns."

Massacre of 500 Feared; U. S. Envoy in Hiding

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Irun, Spain, July 24—Reports from San Sebastian said today Spanish Communists, holding the devastated city under a rain of bombs from rebel airplanes, had threatened to kill 500 Spanish aristocrats there unless the bombing ceased.

The Communists defenders were said to have posted an ultimatum declaring they would line up the imprisoned aristocrats and shoot them down if the air attack were not halted at once.

Ambassador Claude G. Bowers of the United States and his staff were understood to be living in the cellar of a hotel.

The British, German and Italian ambassadors were said to be in other hotel cellars.

The air force is playing a decisive role in the civil war. Rebel airplanes today flew low and dispersed with machine gun fire a column of trucks carrying miners from Asturias to Madrid on the Zamora road.

Rebel headquarters have made no secret of their desire to acquire by purchase or capture more bombing planes. Negotiations are under way for acquiring them and, if possible, bombs from England if no difficulty is raised by the British government.

The rebels are confident that their movement has the sympathy of the British, and today a surprising and no doubt premature announcement made on the rebel radio said the British government had recognized a provisional government with General Miguel Cabanellase as head.

The rebels officially explained, The decision to form a provisional government was taken because four-fifths of the people in Spain are up in arms against Madrid, and provincial governors have deserted their posts and turned their power over to the rebels."

Spanish Clerk in U. S. Consulate Is Murdered

Washington, July 24 (INS)—Slaughter of a Spanish clerk attached to the American consulate at Barcelona and his British companion in the Spanish rebellion was confirmed today in a dispatch to the State Department.

Although their automobile flew the American flag, the two men were murdered in a street of the Spanish seaport as they sought to aid an official of an American automobile concern who was beleaguered in his home on the outskirts of the city.

The clerk, Santiago Iturralde, was a Spanish subject but had served the American consulate in Barcelona for 17 years. Iturralde and an unarmed British citizen were cut down as they sped to the home of George Jenkins, head of the Ford Motor Company in Barcelona. They had been directed by Consul Linn W. Franklin to locate Jenkins and bring him and his family to the safety of the American embassy.

Definite confirmation of the murder came as Franklin reported arrival at 9 a. m., Spanish time today, of the steamship Exeter, which was rushed under special charter at the request of the State Department from Marseilles to evacuate American citizens endangered by the fighting at Barcelona.

One hundred Americans and 100 foreigners of other nationalities were preparing to board the vessel to be taken to safety. The master of the Exeter said he would sail this evening.

Liberalists Draw 6000 Into Mountain Battle

Madrid, July 24—Madrid's Liberalist defenders flung 6,000 militiamen into a mountain battle with Fascist armies 26 miles from the capital today and the crash of cannonading bore witness to the desperate nature of the fighting.

Shouting "forward, comrades, forward!" the militiamen, seizing whatever arms they could, rushed into the clash in a pass of the Guadarrama mountains, gateway to Madrid.

The Fascist attack, headed by rebellious troops, was launched at the point 26 miles northwest of the capital where it was blocked yesterday by loyal artillery, infantry, and airplanes. Defense was being made by approximately 60000 men who had the advantage of the natural protection of the Guadarrama Range, the ancient division between the old provinces of old and new Castille.

The militiamen were, on the whole, ununiformed. Most of them went into the battle wearing black trousers and blue shirts. They were using whatever weapons they owned.

Communists Now Control Madrid, Says New Report

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Burgos, Spain, Headquarters of the Northern Rebel Army. (By Telephone to Paris), July 24—Madrid is invested on all sides and its supplies of foodstuffs and gasoline are diminishing so rapidly the besieged city has now reached conditions comparable to those in Paris under the Communes of 1871, according to information received at rebel headquarters here today.

Unconfirmed reports are current that Madrid has passed under the control of Communists.

The radio station at Bilbao, still in the hands of Madrid forces, has been heard to inquire regarding the whereabouts of three Madrid leaders, Indalecio Prieto, chief of the revolt in Asturias; Francisco Largo Caballero, union chieftain who was close to the Communists, and Alvarez Del Valle.

ANARCHY RIFE

At the same time the Burgos radio reports without confirmation that Portuguese forces announced the killing at the frontier of the former Leftist premier of Spain, Casares Quiroga, whom the rebels accuse of having given the order to murder Jose Calvo Sotelo, monarchist deputy, which precipitated the present revolt.

None of these reports is confirmable, and the fact that hundreds of rebel monarchists and Fascists are here without information concerning the fate of their relatives in Madrid is indicative of the utter state of anarchy into which the civil war has plunged the country.

The advance of the rebels, mostly without resistance, was enlivened today by an aerial combat over Somosierra when four rebel airplanes engaged four Madrid fighters in a joust which thrilled a thousand spectators, but resulted in a draw when the government planes retired.

For half an hour the eight planes circled, dove, and machine-gunned each other until their ammunition ran out.

Rebel hopes of plunging into Madrid via Guadalajara were checked today when the column marching from Pamplona via Soria in an attempt to approach Guadalajara returned to Burgo De Osma, 30 miles farther from the capital.

This set-back was followed by the news that Valencia had been taken by the rebel army Foreign Legion and that Badajoz on the Portuguese frontier surrendered to the rebels.

Reports from Bilbao declare that

Army Halts Near Madrid

Lisbon, July 24 (INS)—Only 13 miles from Madrid, General Emilio Mola's northern rebel army today halted its advance, awaiting reinforcements, before attacking the capital, radio messages said.

MOVE SLAYER SHERMAN TO DEATH CELL

Past the electric chair in which he is scheduled to be put to death during the week of August 2, Newell P. Sherman walked steadily today to take up occupancy in the state prison death house.

The "American Tragedy" wife slayer caught his last glimpse of sky—heavily overcast and spitting rain—while handcuffed to two guards during the 120-yard walk from the Cherry Hill cell block to the death chamber.

He was led into the chamber, past the chair, now canvas covered, and through the inner door into the death house which has had no occupant since January.

IN CELL NO. 1

The door of Cell No. 1—known among convicts as the "jump-off" because it is closest to the chair—clanged shut behind him.

He showed a little surprise when the guards appeared to make the transfer, while other prisoners were at breakfast, but he had nothing to say.

Later, Francis J. W. Lanagan visited him and notified him that Governor Curley and the Executive Council yesterday refused his counsel's application for a respite. Sherman said:

"Well, my attorney is doing all he can for me."

SLEEPS WELL

He has been sleeping well. He smokes a pipe and reads magazines and books furnished by the prison library.

When he shuffles "the last mile" it will be in a pair of size 14 slippers especially made for him at the prison. None of the slippers in stock was large enough.

At about the time of Sherman's transfer to the death house it was learned at Worcester that action will be taken in the United States Supreme Court in an effort to stay the penalty.

TO SEEK NEW TRIAL

J. Fred Humes, counsel for the former choir singer and Boy Scout leader of Sutton, who drowned his wife from a canoe in Lake Singletary, will leave for Washington within 24 hours to file an appeal for a new trial.

This action will be followed by another application to the Governor and council for a respite. Yesterday's refusal was partially based on the fact that no appeal of any nature was pending.

Alleged violation of Sherman's constitutional rights, in that state troopers interviewed prospective jurors before his trial, will be claimed in the Washington action, it was reported.

ARE YOU ON THE BORDERLINE OF ACTUAL SICKNESS?

Constipation* Causes Discomfort, May Lead to More Serious Troubles

You may have days, perhaps even weeks, when you feel below par. Not sick enough to go to bed, but certainly not at your best. The trouble may be with your diet. Poorly balanced meals can affect your physical condition.

Meals which lack proper "bulk," for instance, may lead to common constipation. Continued neglect of this condition causes discomfort, may lead to headaches, poor appetite, listlessness.

Guard against common constipation.* Make sure the meals you eat contain plenty of "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a generous source of effective "bulk." Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and gently cleanses the system.

Two tablespoonfuls daily, with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. Serve ALL-BRAN either as a cereal, or cooked into muffins, breads, etc. Eat it regularly for regular habits.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FR. COUGHLIN HOLDS PHONE TALK WITH VATICAN

Detroit, Father Coughlin's superior, on the S. S. Rex Saturday.

He will be the key witness in an examination of the radio priest's crusading tactics in the United States, a high American prelate said, adding that Coughlin's recent assertion that President Roosevelt was "a liar" had caused a 'painful impression" in the Vatican.

POPE RARELY ACTS

Under the Roman Catholic church tradition, Bishop Gallagher is the man who should approve or disapprove of Coughlin's participation in the Presidential campaign.

Prelates pointed out that instances in which a pope—who is bishop of Rome—had overruled another bishop in a matter of the latter's diocese were rare.

They said Pope Pius would hear Bishop Gallagher's views on Coughlin's activities before taking any step in the controversy.

Meanwhile, piles of correspondence on the subject are heaped on Vatican desks. Letters of all types have come in to the Vatican from defenders and critics of Father Coughlin.

Fr. Coughlin Makes Public Apology

Detroit, July 24 (AP)—A public apology by Father Charles E. Coughlin for calling President Roosevelt a "liar" was in the record today, but the same open letter to the President that contained it expressed an intention to do all possible to defeat him for re-election.

In a subsequent interview at his Shrine of the Little Flower, Father Coughlin said that "I have no personal quarrel with the President and I believe he is well-intentioned, but he succeeds in surrounding himself with crackpots."

The formal statment was published under the heading "an open letter of apology to President Roosevelt," in the July 27 issue of "Social Justice," organ of Father Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice.

SPOKE IN ANGER

Signed by Father Coughlin, it said that he spoke "in righteous anger" when "I addressed to the President of the United States in a speech at Cleveland July 16 the word 'liar,'" and "for that action I now offer to the President my sincere apology."

The same open letter said that "As my President I still respect you; as a fellow citizen and as a man I still regard you highly, but as an executive, despite your excellency's fine intentions, I deem it best for the welfare of our common country that you be supplanted in office. To that end, in a gentlemanly and courageous manner, I shall strive."

The possibility existed that Father Coughlin's efforts toward that end might be restrained.

An American prelate in Rome said the church was considering action to curtail the Royal Oak priest's political activieies, which have included endorsement of Rep. William Lemke as candidate of the Union party for President. Any such action awaits the arrival at Rome of Bishop Michael Gallagher, Father Coughlin's ecclesiastical superior at Detroit.

Father Coughlin said that:

"Whatever orders come from Rome curtailing my preaching Social Justice, I shall be only too happy to accede to the request and obey orders."

The speech in which he referred to the President as a "liar" and as "Franklin Double-Crossing Roosevelt" was made at the recent national convention of the Townsend organization in Cleveland.

Informed of the apology, Dr. Francis E. Townsend said Father Coughlin "let the word slip in the heat of a speech" and "it should not be held too harshly against him."

Father Coughlin said that he appeared at the Townsend convention at the request of Dr. Townsend and another man whom he did identify.

"They said Jim Farley's man, Gomer Smith was disrupting the convention and that I could be of great service in nullifying his attempts," the priest said. "I went to try to keep Dr. Townsend's following behind him."

SPEECH EXTEMPORANEOUS

There, in a speech he said was extemporaneous, he declared:

"As far as the National Union is concerned, no candidate endorsed for Congress can campaign, go electioneering for, or support the great betrayer and liar, Franklin D. Roosevelt, he who promised to drive the money changers from the temple and succeeded in driving the farmers from their homesteads and the citizens from their homes in the cities."

In his open letter of apolgy, Father Coughlin said he reference was not to promises made by the President to him, but to "the recorded promises held out to a nation during 1932 by a candidate for the presidency. I had in mind the noble inaugural address delivered by that candidate elect; and had in mind as oath of office to uphold the Constitution of the United States."

He recalled that President Roosevelt, in an address on May 14, 1935, used the word "lying" in referring to critics of his farm program.

In the subsequent interview, Father Coughlin said that President who becomes a candidate for re-election "can claim no special privilege on the grounds that he is President of the United States."

It was suggested in some quarters that Bishop Michael Gallagher, of Detroit, Father Coughlin's superior, might ask Pope Pius to transfer the radio priest from his diocese to spare him further embarrassment.

BISHOP AWAITED

Prelates, however, expressed the belief the Holy Father would prefer to transfer Father Coughlin himself, rather than taking any action which, by implication, might reflect on the aged bishop.

Any question of transfer or censure, informed Vatican circles said, certainly will arise only after a possible private warning to Father Coughlin and his refusal to heed it.

The prelates were declared to be awaiting with utmost interest Bishop Gallagher's expected arrival here Saturday.

They said even a Papal admonition to Father Coughlin, should one develop, might be very mild, in view of certain precedent for his activities.

The prelates recalled the case of Don Sturzo, a Sicilian priest who became the crusading leader of the "Partito Popolaire" before the advent of Italian Fascism.

Don Sturzo, one-time mayor of a Sicilian town, attracted such a following that just before the introduction of the Fascist regime his party held 106 seats in the Chamber of Deputies and was second in strength only to the Socialists.

The Sicilian father is in voluntary exile in Great Britain now because of hs differences with Fascism. At no time did the Vatican take any action to modify his political activity.

Bedford Woman Dies in Crash

The 114th death in Greater Boston since January 1 was recorded today when Mrs. Laura B. Wamboldt, 55, of Old Billerica rd., Bedford, was killed when the car in which she was riding with her son crashed into a tree on Massachusetts avenue, Lexington.

AUTOS HAVE KILLED 114 IN GREATER BOSTON THIS YEAR

She had been riding home with her son, Clarence A. Wamboldt, 27, who was driving. They had visited a physician who was treating the son for injuries he had received in an accident a week ago.

Wamboldt told police that everything suddenly went black while he was driving. When he recovered consciousness, he told police, he discovered the car against a tree.

Communist Party Seeks Radio Time

Radio dates are being negotiated for by the Communist Party with the two larger radio chains, according to word from New York today, and the belief is that the Communists intend to use the radio time for political propaganda.

Negotiations, it is said, are underway between the Communists and officials of both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Four radio dates have been asked from each company on coast-to-coast hookups, and it is understood that details of the radio time and the programs will be worked out after August 1.

2 Killed, 30 Hurt In Tent Collapse

Trenton, N. J., July 24 (INS)—Two men were killed and at least 30 persons were injured early today when a circus tent in which a "walkathon" was in progress was blown from its moorings on the Trenton fair grounds during a severe electrical storm.

More than 200 persons were inside the tent at the time, police said.

Victim of So. Boston Attack

Miss Marian Kelley, of South Boston, victim of attack which resulted in the beating of two South Boston policemen. The policemen saved her from the attempted attack.

2 OFFICERS BEATEN RESCUING WOMAN

self a resident of East Fourth street, was rushed to City Hospital suffering from internal hemorrhages.

There a blood transfusion was decided upon and Captain Joseph McKinnon of the South Boston division called for volunteers. Patrolmen Victor Parent, John Barry, Frank Hennessey, Herbert Stockman and John Francoeur went to the hospital prepared to act as donors.

Patrolman Reeve was beaten in the face and body but clung to Silva who, police said, was identified by Miss Kelley.

Patrolmen Reeves and McGeorge were strolling along Broadway, from City Point, when they heard screams emanating from the rear of the Strand Theater. They rushed in and found Silva allegedly beating Miss Kelley. The other man was nearby, police said.

McGeorge later collapsed at the station and later Dr. Joseph W. Devine, Boston police surgeon, was summoned, he was removed to the hospital.

GIRL TELLS STORY

"Usually, my father and I go up to a beer parlor every night for a glass of beer. I had never before gone by myself, but, last night my father couldn't go with me.

"I went up there alone around quarter past eleven. When I entered the place I saw one boy I knew, sitting with another I didn't know. I simply said, 'hello' and went over to another table to sit by myself and to have a glass of beer by myself.

"They didn't sit with me. They didn't drink with me. And they didn't pay for my beer. When I had the beer, I left the place and started walking down East Broadway to my home.

TAKES SHORT CUT

"Near the Strand Theatre, I decided to take a short cut home. Suddenly, I felt I was being followed and when I turned around, I saw the boy I knew with his friend.

"I said 'Hello' again but kept on walking. As I neared the head of the alley in the rear of the theater, the fellow I had never seen before, grabbed me by my hair. I was hatless.

"He was drunk. The fellow I knew, ran away. I was knocked down to the ground. I screamed and the fello punched at my chin, but the blo didn't land. So I screamed again.

OFFICERS ARRIVE

"All this while he was trying to drag me down the alley. Luckily, a cruising car with the two officers drove by and heard me yelling.

"They hopped on the fellow who was beating me and that give me a chance to jump up and run. And I did until I reached my home.

"Later the officers brought the fellow to me and I identified him. The other boy, the one I knew, had nothing to do with it at all. He ran away. I wouldn't say a word against him."

H. T. Archibald, Horseman, Dead

H. Teller Archibald, millionaire Chicago and Miami sportsman and owner of a large string of horses now quartered at Suffolk Downs, died early this morning in an exclusive Swampscott hotel from a heart attack.

Mr. Archibald was known from coast to coast for his activities about the tracks, but had been confined to his bed since Saturday. He had made the trip East to witness the Massachusetts Handicap, which was run off Wednesday.

At the present time Mr. Archibald has 18 horses at the East Boston, oval, the most prominent of which are Foxo, Office Boy, Westy's Duchess and Candy Prince. He was a member of the "Committee of 100," an exclusive gathering of millionaires that wintered at Miami Beach.

At the time of his death, his wife, Dorothy L. Archibald, was at his bedside. Funeral services will take place from the home of his brother, Clarence L. Archibald, 1410 Madison street, Washington, D. C. and burial will be in the family lot in that city.

HOLC PREPARES TO TAKE OVER MANY HOMES

Agents of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation are taking assignments of property from homeowner borrowers now unable to meet principal as well as interest payments, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The assignments give the HOLC power to oust the tenants at any time, and dispose of the property without recourse to court foreclosure proceedings and oft-times unfavorable publicity.

In addition to an undetermined number of assignments, 115 foreclosure proceedings had been completed in Massachusetts before the first of this month.

365 TO LOSE HOMES

Efforts to determine the number of HOLC borrowers who face the loss of their homes by one means or another met with no success at the HOLC office, 150 Causeway street.

There it was stated that the records have been sent to Washington headquarters.

At the Washington headquarters it was said the figures were in Boston.

The Boston Evening American was informed that 365 borrowers now unable to make payments on the principal of their loans will lose their homes.

PROTECT BONDS

Foreclosures are being made to protect the bondholders it was stated. The bonds are held almost exclusively by banks, many of which received HOLC money in return for mortgages on non-productive properties.

Edward Wise, public relations manager of the HOLC office here said:

"There will be some foreclosure proceedings instituted here and there are some foreclosure proceedings in the making, but there is no way of estimating the number or who the victims will be. That information will have to be obtained from Washington.

"The reason for these foreclosures is that the bondholders must be protected."

80 MILLION IN LOANS

Wise added that widows and other unfortunates were not being singled out but that some may be included.

HOLC loaned about $80,000,000 in Massachusetts to 20,000 home owners.

From 1933 until June 1, 1936, the borrowers were required to pay only the interest, but now principal payments are falling due and it is impossible for many to meet the demands.

Daniel J. LeHand, state manager of HOLC, referred all questions to Wise.

ALLOWED HOME USE

Agents seeking property assignments from those unable to make their payments promise to allow the owner to remain on the premises until such time as HOLC decides it must dispose of the property, a step which, under the assignment, may be taken at any time.

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, of which HOLC is a subsidiary, has pending before him now a number of cases in which the American Legion and similar organizations have requested that no foreclosures be made. Under the Home Loan act the board has the power to suspend interest and principal demands in any deserving cases.

Bounty-ful

San Francisco, July 24 (AP)—Kenneth F. MacDonald, Montana state fish and game warden, told members of the Western Fish and Game Association 14,000 coyotes were killed last year at a bounty of $2 each, but:

"We do know that an Indian in Canada, which does not pay a bounty, was raising coyotes which he sold to Montana hunters for $1 apiece, who in turn brought them across the border and sold them for the $2 bounty."

Overworked?
Avoid Constipation

Long hours at the desk, shortened hours of sleep, hasty and irregular meals, lack of exercise—these sap the vitality of the strongest body.

As such times the danger of constipation is more common and more serious.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Just try Nujol regularly for the next month and see if you don't feel better than you ever suspected you could.

"Missing Man" Safe at Home With Boat

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

When the Eastern steamship Evangeline came into port today, it brought Harry F. Phillips, 56, the retired Swampscott lawyer—plus his row boat. Worry over his safety on his trip in the small boat to which he often attached a sail was halted when reports came that he was safe at Yarmouth, N. S. Phillips, the classmate of President Roosevelt at Harvard, often takes long trips in this small craft.

PHILLIPS TELLS STORY OF 5 DAYS AT SEA

Keeping himself alive with lemon juice and canned peas for five days in a 14-pound rowboat, dodging thrashing whales and tossed about by violent squalls on the Bay of Fundsy.

That was the story today of Harry F. Phillips, 56, lawyer and classmate of President Roosevelt at Harvard, when he arrived from Yarmouth on the S.S. Evangeline.

Phillips, who lives in Swampscott, had been missing since Monday when the Bowdoin College biological expedition radioed they had seen him driving into a squall 60 miles off Kent Island. No word was received from him until yesterday. He then telephoned relatives from Yarmouth shortly before he sailed on the Evangeline.

"I hadn't the faintest idea anybody worried about me until I learned that I was 'missing' over the long distance telephone yesterday."

He pointed with pride to his frail craft on the dock.

"Nobody could get hurt in that boat. Last Friday I pushed off from Jonesport with cans of lemon juice and peas, rowed down to Cutler, Me. By Saturday in good weather I reached Kent Island. It was great fun.

"Trouble—if any—started as I crossed the bay and curious, flapping whales drove me into Tverton, N. S. They bothered me more than the squall. On the way I passed the Bowdoin College boys and they must have wired that the storm got me."

Phillips explained that special pontoons protected the boat from capsizing or sinking. He goes off on such trips every year. This year he covered 135 miles.

Phillips' brothers, Leonard, 29, and Hollis, 23, were at the dock to meet him.

2300 Boys Enroll For CCC Camps

With the quota set at 1350 and already filled, more than 2300 youths in the state have filed applications for work at Civilian Conservation Corps camps, it was revealed today.

This was announced by Mrs. Lauretta C. Bresnahan, state selecting agent at the Army Base.

Policeman Hurt By Mystery Bomb

Syracuse, N. Y., July 24 (AP)—Patrolman John E. Hanlesy was seriously injured early today by an explosive missle thrown from a car. The patrolman, on duty as a guard at the strike-closed plant of Remington-Rand, Inc., was injured when he stooped to pick it up.

No adjustments have been made to make it perform differently from any new stock car. The jug is added so that you can see a measured amount of gasoline used with your own eyes, instead of having it come from the tank at the rear.

FULL TEXT OF GOV. LANDON'S ACCEPTANCE SPEECH

ECONOMY AND LIGHTER TAX BURDEN IS ADVOCATED

Topeka, Kans., July 24 (US)—Governor Alfred M. Landon's address here tonight, accepting the Republican presidential nomination follows in full:

Mr. Chairman, members of the Notification Committee, ladies and gentlemen:

I accept the nomination of the Republican Party for the Presidency of the United States. In accepting this leadership I pray for Divine guidance to make me worthy of the faith and the confidence which you have shown in me.

This call, coming to one whose life has been that of the everyday American is proof of that freedom of opportunity which belongs to the people under our government. It carries with it both an honor and a responsibility. In a republic these cannot be separated.

Tonight, facing this honor and responsibility, I pray for the gift of simple and straight forward speech. I want every man and woman in this Nation to understand my every word, for I speak of issues deeply concerning us all.

The citizen who assumes the direction of the executive branch of our government takes an oath that he will "faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will," to the best of his ability, "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

This oath carries the obligation, so to use executive power that it will fulfill the purposes for which it was delegated.

No man, in common good faith to his fellow citizens, may rightfully assume the duties of the high office of Chief Executive and take the oath that goes with the office, unless he shall intend to keep and shall keep his oath inviolate.

It is with a full understanding of the meaning of this oath that I accept this nomination.

No People Can Make Headway by Idleness

The 1936 platform of the Republican party has my complete adherence. It sets out the principles by which we can achieve the full national life that our resources entitle us to enjoy. There is not time to lay our whole program before you tonight. I can touch only upon a few phases of it. The others I hope to discuss with you in detail as the campaign progresses.

First, I shall take up the question of recovery and relief. I shall follow this by discussing a matter closely allied to both, debts and taxes.

Our farm policy and the problems of labor will bring me to a brief discussion of international relations.

I intend to approach the issues fairly, as I see them, without rancor or passion. If we are to go forward permanently, it must be with a united nation—not with a people torn by appeals to prejudice and divided by class feeling.

The time has come to pull together.

No people can make headway where great numbers are supported in idleness. There is no future on the relief rolls. The law of this world is that man shall eat bread by the sweat of his brow.

The whole American people want to work at full time and at full pay. They want homes and a chance for their children, reasonable security and the right to live according to American standards. They want to share in a steady progress.

We bind ourselves with a pledge we shall not ignore, thrust aside, or forget, to devote our whole energy to bringing these things about.

The world has tried to conquer this depression by different methods. None of them has been fully successful. Too frequently recovery has been hindered, if not defeated, by political considerations.

Our own country has tried one economic theory after another. The present administration asked for, and received, extraordinary powers upon the assurance that these were to be temporary. Most of its proposals did not follow familiar paths to recovery. We knew they were being undertaken hastily and with little deliberation.

But because the measures were supposed to be temporary, because everybody hoped they would prove successful, and because the people wanted the administration to have a fair trial. Congress and the country united in support of its efforts at the outset.

New Deal Has Fallen Far Short of Success

Now it becomes our duty to examine the record as it stands. The record shows that these measures did not fit together into any definite program of recovery. Many of them worked at cross-purposes and defeated themselves. Some developed into definite hindrances to recovery. They had the effect generally of extending control by Washington into the remotest corners of the country.

The frequent and sudden changes in the administration's policy caused a continual uneasiness.

As a result, recovery has been set back again and again. This was not all of the failure. Practical progressives have suffered the disheartening experience of seeing many liberal objectives discredited during the past three years by careless thinking, unworkable laws and incompetent administration.

The nation has not made the durable progress, either in reform or recovery, that we had the right to expect.

For it must be remembered that the welfare of our people is not recorded on the financial pages of the newspapers. It cannot be measured in stock market prices. The real test is to be found in the ability of the average American to engage in business, to obtain a job, to be a self-supporting and self-respecting member of his community.

Judged by the things that make us a nation of happy families, the New Deal has fallen far short of success. The proof of this is in the record.

The record shows that in 1933 the primary need was jobs for the unemployed. The record shows that in 1936 the primary need still is jobs for the unemployed.

The time has come to stop this fumbling with recovery. American initiative is not a commodity to be delivered in pound packages through a governmental bureau. It is a vital force in the life of our nation and it must be freed!

The country is ripe for recovery. We are far behind in expenditures for upkeep and improvements and for expansion.

The total of this demand—in industry, in new enterprises, in our homes and on our farms—amounts to billions of dollars. Once all this consumer demand is released, the problem will not be where to find work for the workers but where to find workers for the work.

Pledges U. S. Help To All Unemployed

One of the signs of the ending of past depressions was the launching of new business ventures. It is true that most of them were small. Altogether, however, they provided work for many millions of people. In the present depression, this demand for work has not yet appeared. Few new ventures have been started. Why? Because the small businessman, the working man who would like to become his own boss—the average American—has hesitated to start out for himself. He lacks confidence in the soundness of Federal policy; he is afraid of what may come next.

We must dispel his fear, restore his confidence and place our reliance once more in the initiative, intelligence and courage of these makers of jobs and opportunities. That is why I say, in all earnestness, that the time has come to unshackle initiative and free the spirit of American enterprise.

Calls for Workable Social Security Act

We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility. We must be freed from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation. We must be freed from the effects of an arbitrary and uncertain monetary policy. And, through a vigorous enforcement of the anti-trust laws, we must be freed from private monopolistic control.

Once these things are done, the energies of the American economic system will remedy the ravages of depression and restore full activity and full employment.

Out of this depression has come, not only the problem of recovery, but also the equally grave problem of caring for the unemployed until recovery is attained. Their relief at all times is a matter of plain duty.

We of our party pledge that this obligation will never be neglected. In extending help, however, we will handle the public funds as a public trust. We will recognize that all citizens, irrespective of color, race, creed or party affiliation, have an equal right to this protection.

We would consider it base beyond words to make loyalty or service to party a condition upon which the needy unemployed might obtain help. Those who use public funds to build their political machines, forfeit all right to political consideration from true Americans.

And let me emphasize this, while we propose to follow a policy of economy in government expenditures, those who need relief will get it. We will not take our economies out of the allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters.

The question is not as stated by the administration—how much money the American people are willing to spend for relief. The question is how much waste the American people are willing to stand for in the administration of relief.

The destruction of human values by this depression has been far greater than the American people suffered during the World War.

When the depression began, millions of dependable men and women had employment. They were the solid citizenery of America; they had lived honestly and had worked hard. They had dealt fairly with the government which, in turn, had depended upon their support.

Then they found themselves deprieved of unemployment by economic forces over which they had no control. Little by little they spent their life savings while vainly seeking new jobs.

In addition, we shall amend the Social Security Act to make it workable. We recognize that society, acting through government, must afford as large a measure of protection as it can against involuntary unemployment and dependency in old age. We pledge that the Federal government will do its proper share in that task.

But it must be kept in mind that the security of all of us depends on the good management of our common affairs. We must be able to produce and accumulate enough to finance our normal progress as well as to take care of ourselves and of those entitled to protection.

Mounting debts and increasing taxes constitute a threat to all of these aims. They absorb the funds that might be used to create new things or to reduce the cost of present goods.

Taxes, both visible and invisible, add to the price of everything. By taking more and more out of the family purse, they leave less for the family security. Let us not be misled by those who tell us that others will be made to carry the burden for us.

Farmers of Nation Must Have Support

A simple inquiry into the facts and figures will show that our growing debts and taxes are so enormous that, even if we tax to the utmost limits those who are best able to pay, the average taxpayer will still have to bear the major part.

While spending billions of dollars of borrowed money may create a temporary appearance of prosperity, we and our children, as taxpayers, have yet to pay the bill. For every single dollar spent we will pay back two dollars!

Crushing debts and evil taxes are usually incurred, as they are being incurred today, under the guise of helping people—the same people who must finally pay them. They invariably retard prosperity and they sometimes lead to situations in which the rights of the people are destroyed. This is the lesson of history,

Telling Points Of Address

Here are highlights of Governor Alfred M. Landon's address accepting the nomination for President:

"If we are to go forward permanently, it must be with a united nation—not with a people torn by appeals to prejudice and divided by class feeling."

* * *

"Let me emphasize that, while we propose to follow a policy of economy in government expenditures, those who need relief will get it."

* * *

"The Republican party does not believe that the people wish to abandon the American form of government. We propose to maintain the constitutional balance of power between the states and the federal government."

* * *

"We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility. We must be freed from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation. We must be freed from the effects of an arbitrary and uncertain monetary policy. And, through a vigorous enforcement of anti-trust laws, we must be freed from private monopolistic control."

* * *

"We shall join in no plan that might involve us in a war in the beginning of which we had no part, or that would build a false peace on the foundation of armed camps."

* * *

"We will not take our economies out of the allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters."

* * *

"The whole American people want to work at full time and at full pay . . . They want to share in a steady progress. We bind ourselves . . . to devote our whole energy to bringing about these things."

* * *

"Our party holds nothing to be of more urgent importance than putting our financial house in order."

* * *

"For the good of all of us, we must re-establish responsibility in the handling of government finances. We must recognize that a government does not have an unlimited supply of money to spend."

and we have seen it occur in the modern world.

Our party holds nothing to be of more urgent importance than putting our financial house in order. For the good of all of us, we must re-establish responsibility in the handling of government finances.

We must recognize that a government does not have an unlimited supply of money to spend. It must husband its resources just as truly as does the head of a family. Unless it follows such a course it cannot afford the services which the people themselves expect.

I now turn to agriculture.

No sound national policy looking to the national welfare will neglect the farmer. This is not because the farmer needs or wishes to be coddled or that he asks for undue help. It is necessary because the needs of a great nation require that its food producers shall always stand upon a social and economic plane in keeping with the national importance of their service.

The present administration's efforts to produce this result have not been successful. Payment under the Triple-A did help to tide farmers over a difficult period. But, even before it was ruled out by the Supreme Court, the Triple-A was rapidly disorganizing American agriculture. Some of its worst effects continue.

By its policies the Administration has taken the American farmer out of foreign markets and put the foreign farmer into the American market. The loss of markets, both at home and abroad, far outweighs the value of all the benefits paid to farmers.

Worse than this, from the standpoint of the public is the fact that the Administration, through its program of scarcity, has gambled with the needed food and feed supplies of the country. It overlooked the fact that Mother Nature cannot be regimented.

The time has now come when we must replace this futile program with one that is economically and socially right.

Backs Organization Of Labor Unions

The wealth of our soil must be preserved. We shall establish effective soil conservation and erosion control policies in connection with a national and use flood prevention program —and keep it all out of politics

Our farmers are entitled to all of the home market they can supply without injustice to the consumer. We propose a policy that protects them in this right.

Some of our farmers, dependent in part upon foreign markets, suffer from disadvantages arising from world disorder. Until these disadvantages are eliminated we propose to pay cash benefits in order to cushion our farm families against the disastrous effects of price fluctuations and to protect their standard of living.

The American people, now as always, are responsive to distress caused by disasters, such as the present drouth. Our platform reflects that spirit. We shall fulfil its pledge to give every reasonable assistance to producers in areas suffering from such temporary afflictions, so that they may again get on a self supporting basis.

Our farm program as a whole will be made to serve a vital national principle.

The family type of farm has long constituted one of the cherished foundations of our social strength. It represents human values that we must not lose. Widespread ownership of moderate sized tracts of land was the aim of the Republican Homestead Act. This conception of agriculture is one phase of the general principle that we stand for—representing freedom of opportunity in all walks of life.

The benefits which we will pay under our program will go no higher than the production level of the family type of farm.

Another matter of deep concern is the welfare of American labor. The general well being of our country requires that labor shall have the position and rewards of prosperity to which it is entitled. I firmly believe that labor has the right to protect this position and to achieve those rewards by organizing in labor unions. Surely the history of labor in the United States has demonstrated that working conditions, wages and hours have been improved through self organization.

The right of labor to organize means to meet the right of employes to join any type of union they prefer, whether it covers their plant, their craft or their industry. It means that, in the absence of a union contract, an employe has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union.

Promises to Back Peace in World

Under all circumstances, so states the Republican platform, employees are to be free from interference from any source, which means, as I read it, entire freedom from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow employe or any other person.

The government must maintain itself in the position of an umpire; first, to protect the public interest, and second, to act as a mediator between conflicting groups. One of the greatest problems of this country is to develop effective methods of conciliation.

Taking a dispute, after it gets into a tangle, and rushing it to the doorstep of the President is a bad way to handle a labor situation or any other situation.

In international affairs also, the Republican Party has always worked for the advancement of justice and peace. Following the early tradition of our country, it has consistently urged the adjustment of international disputes in accordance with law, equity and justice. We have now again declared our continual loyalty to this principle.

Republican Presidents sent delegates to The Hague conferences and one of them took the leading part in the termination of the Russo-Japanese War. Another Republican President called a conference which, for the first time, produced a reduction and limitation of arms on a wide scale. Still another led in securing the treaty outlawing wars.

In purpose and achievement, our party has a record which points the way to further helpful service in creating international understanding, in removing the causes of war, and in reducing and limiting arms.

We shall take every opportunity to promote among the nations a peace based upon justice and human rights. We shall join in no plan that would take from us that independence of judgment which has made the United States a power for good in the world We shall join in no plan that might involve us in a war in the beginning of which we had no part, or that would build a false peace on the foundation of armed camps.

I turn now to the basic principles upon which our nation is founded. America has always stood, and now stands, first of all, for human rights, for "the life, liberty and pursuit of happiness" of the Great Declaration.

The prime needs of men have not changed since that declaration, though new means from time to time may be necessary to meet those needs. But the great safeguards against tyranny and oppression must not be cast away and lost. They must be saved that men may live free to pursue their happiness, safe from any kind of exploitation.

Constitution Basic Structure of Nation

One cannot face this occasion and the prospect flowing from it without a sobering reflection upon the beginnings, growth, and destiny of our nation.

Our government was founded to give life to certain vital principles. The people embodied these basic principles of human rights in the federal and state constitutions. Thus, the people themselves, of their own free will, set up this government. And it is still the government of the people. Any change which the people want they can have by following the procedure they themselves laid down.

But for any official or branch of government to attempt such a change, without authority from the people, is to do an unwarranted and illegal act. It is a substitution of personal for constitutional government. If added power is needed, the people have set out how that authority may be had from them if they wish to give it.

This, in its broad essentials, is the basic structure of our government.

As our economic life has become more complex and specialized some need, real or apparent, has often been urged as an excuse for a further grant of power from the people. They have sometimes given, sometimes withheld the desired power.

There has now appeared in high places, however, a new and dangerous impulse. This is the impulse to take away and lodge in the Chief Executive, without the people's consent, the powers which they have kept in their state governments or which they have reserved in themselves.

In its ultimate effect upon the welfare of the whole people, this, then, is the most important question now before us: shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive or do we desire to preserve the American form of government? Shall we continue to recognize that certain rights reside with the people, that certain powers are reserved for the states, and that certain functions are delegated to the Federal government?

Now I know that many of us, at one time or another, have become dissatisfied and impatient with the efforts of our local and state administrations to solve our difficulties.

At such times it has seemed to us that only a larger, more powerful unit of government could meet the need.

For those who have followed such a line of reasoning I have the understanding that comes from experience. As a young man I was attracted to the idea of centralizing in the Federal government ful. power to correct the abuses growing out of a more complex social order.

When the people rejected this alternative, I was as disappointed as any one. But in spite of this rejection, I have lived to see many of those abuses substantially corrected by the forty-eight state legislatures in their fields and by the Federal government in its field of interstate commerce.

More recently, as a small independent oil producer, I saw my industry ask for Federal regulation because of a selfish exploitation of a natural resource, which, once wasted, cannot be replaced.

When Federal regulation failed, the industry made progress in the solution of the problem, by turning to state action, supplemented with interstate compacts as provided by the amazing foresight of the makers of the Constitution.

It is not my belief that the Constitution is above change. The people have the right, by the means they have prescribed to change their form of government to fit their wishes. If they could not do this, they would not be free. But change must come by and through the people and not by usurpation. Changes should come openly, after full and free discussion, and after full opportunity for the people to express their will.

The Republican party, however, does not believe that the people wish to abandon the American form of government.

We propose to maintain the constitutional balance of power between the states and the federal government.

We propose to use the full power of the federal government to break up private monopolies and to eliminate private monopolistic practices

In other words, the Republican party proposes to restore and to maintain a free competitive system—a system under which, and only under which, can there be independence, equality of opportunity and work for all.

A free competitive system is necessary to a free government Neither political nor civil liberty long survives the loss of economic liberty Each and all of these liberties, with the precious human rights which they involve, must be preserved intact and inviolate.

Aims to Co-operate With Congress

If I am elected chief executive of this nation I propose to restore our government to an efficient as well as constitutional basis.

I shall call to my aid those men best qualified to conduct the public business—and I mean just that.

I shall stand back of them.

I shall hold them responsible for doing their jobs.

I shall co-operate wholeheartedly with Congress in an effective reorganization of the numerous governmental agencies, to get rid of those that are not necessary, to eliminate duplication, to insure better administration and to save the taxpayers' money.

I hold that it is the right of our people to have their greatest public service enterprise — their government — well administered.

These are some of the aims and proposals of a Republican administration that would enter office under a pledge to conduct the public business with honesty, frugality, courage and common sense

In common with all my countrymen, I look forward to the America that is to be.

It should be a nation in which the old wrong things are going out and the new right things are coming in.

It should be a country which produces more and more until there is plenty for all, with a fair chance for all to earn their share.

It should be a land in which equal opportunity shall prevail and special privilege shall have no place.

It should be an America that shall bring to bear the whole of her great spiritual force in a common effort to drive the curse of war from the earth, an America that, for the sake of all mankinds as well as ourselves, shall never lose the faith that human freedom is a practical ideal.

It is in these aims and in these works that I vision the manifest destiny of America. Everything we need for their realization we can find. I firmly believe, within the principles under which this nation has grown to greatness. God grant us, one and all, the strength and the wisdom to do our part in bringing these things to pass.

Did You Know that the WEIGHT of a gasoline indicates its POWER?

Gasolines vary in weight. They vary in power the same way. And the HEAVIER a gasoline—the more power it contains. Weight alone does not indicate quality but weight with the proper volatility does.

Perhaps you've never thought of gasoline as a FUEL. But gasoline is as much a fuel as coal. One is burned for power—the other is burned for heat.

Now—fuel values are compared by measuring the heat units released when the fuel is burned. The more of these units in a given amount of fuel—the more heat or power is produced on combustion.

One gallon of Jenney Aero weighs nearly half a pound more and contains over 5,000 more power units than the average weight of the 10 leading brands of gasoline (5 regular—5 premium). Thus the greater mileage you get from JENNEY AERO, as it stands to reason that the more powerful a gasoline the further a gallon will take you.

It also explains the smoother, faster pick-up, in traffic and on the hills, the better, all-around performance your car gives when it's powered with JENNEY AERO.

And it's better power, too—CLEANER, SAFER, MORE EFFICIENT in every way. Instead of the explosive shocks of ordinary gasoline, Jenney Aero, burning evenly and completely, delivers steady power impulses. Each one is a powerful push rather than a sharp hammer blow. ' IIS ELIMINATES KNOCKING.

SAD Economic TRAGEDY

ANNIHILATION OF AMOSKEAG

By B. C. FORBES

Tragedy: A federal judge has ordered that the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, of Manchester, N. H., for a generation one of New England's greatest textile plants, be liquidated, put out of business. It has employed as many as 15,000 workers.

Over thirty years ago I "covered" dry goods as a business reporter. In those days "Amoskeag" was a name to conjure with. It stood ace-high. It was a power, a leader. It stood for the best and the strongest in the New England textile industry.

Its annihilation, therefore, saddens me.

The New Deal has exhibited and is exhibiting laudable anxiety to alleviate agricultural tragedies. But it has exhibited less anxiety to avoid precipitating or to ameliorate industrial tragedies. Bluntly, the brain trusters have all along exercised hostility towards business and industry.

Yet it wouldn't be fair to attribute the troubles of New England's textile industry to the Roosevelt administration. Its troubles, deeply rooted, set in long before 1933. Nor is it at all certain that a change in the administration would restore New England to its former textile leadership.

What has brought about the decay of New England textiles?

The causes, in my opinion, are partly fundamental, partly attributable to textile mill owners and managements, partly attributable to organized labor leaders.

First, New England mills were far from raw material sources. The whole industrial trend this century, and particularly within recent years, has been to locate manufacturing plants as near as possible to the supplies of raw materials—the steel industry is a shining example. It was natural that sites for new cotton mills should be chosen in the South.

But other influences have operated.

Labor leaders, wisely or unwisely, have repeatedly incited strikes in New England textile plants. By creating powerful unions, they succeeded in forcing up textile wages, admittedly low in comparison with rates paid by newer industries. Meanwhile, unionism remained much less dictatorial in southern cotton manufacturing centers. This handicapped New England concerns in competing with southern concerns. Incidentally, it is inevitable that unionism will spread to the South and bring about higher wage levels there.

But New England ownership and management cannot be held entirely blameless.

The textile industry has been singularly backward in modernization, in merchandizing, in advertising, in research, in developing new markets, in creating demand for trade-marked products.

It may be replied that cotton goods do not lend themselves to successful advertising, to effective exploitation, to creating national wide demand for any particular product or brand.

But consider, for instance, the cigarette industry. One cigarette, after all, is not tremendously different from another. Nevertheless manufacturers, through heroic advertising, have bedecked their particular cigarette with amazing glamor. They have exercised captivating ingenuity in investing their product with alluring qualities and innovations. Recall the national appeal they made and the national interest they aroused when they introduced cellophane to wrap their packages.

Every important cigarette manufacturer has made his brand a household word.

How many brands of textiles have become household words?

Is it not significant that the industries which have achieved the most notable success during the last few decades are those which have devoted the most painstaking attention to research, to improving their products, to modernizing their production equipment, and not least, to advertising their wares, to bidding most keenly and persistently for a share of the consumer's dollar.

Even the steel industry, long easygoing, is now wakening up to the importance of originating better products and of advertising.

Whether the New England textile industry can be effectively regenerated, revised, restored to its old-time prosperity, I do not pretend to know.

But the fate which has befallen the once-great Amoskeag company is a sad social and economic tragedy.

HANEY ON BUSINESS:

Only Uncertainties OF NEW DEAL HAVE Held Markets Down

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, July 24—Possibly the most significant non-political development bearing on business prospects is the upward trend of commodity prices. In the last few days these have resumed the rise that was interrupted last week.

We should again be reminded that the basis for higher prices has long been laid, and that only the great uncertainties the New Deal imposes upon business have prevented soaring markets.

Now the promise of a return to political sanity, combined with the certainty of important crop shortages, are bringing a wave of buying that looks as if it would be more sustained than any of the artificial New Deal spurts.

The strength in commodity markets is not confined to wheat and corn, but includes copper and steel, to say nothing of cocoa and rubber. It begins to look as if sufficient confidence is developing to cause more forward buying, and as orders increase prices will rise, while, as prices rise, orders will increase. Such moves, in part, feed upon their own strength.

In short, I am inclined to agree with the opinion of the commodity research bureau, which organization states that "the major factors underlying the general commodity situation continue to favor a higher price level. Stocks are low, agricultural production has been cut drastically by drouth, and consumption is expanding."

* * *

The point to stress is that the price rise is not being confined to agricultural products, but, under the influence of more-than-seasonal business activity, is spreading to industrial raw materials and products.

For example, all records for the domestic consumption of rubber were broken in June, with a high figure of 52,646 tons.

Then there are the significant moves in copper and steel scrap. All the copper producers have raised their prices to 9¾ cents, and the response of buyers gives ample indication that they foresee heavy requirements. In their rush to cover anticipated needs before the higher price takes effect, they bought so heavily that all records were broken for a single day's sales.

Doubtless such a buying wave will be followed by a lull, but it shows that the demand is there, and it will considerably reduce producers stocks. And the domestic copper situation is strengthened by a strong foreign demand, with the foreign market firm at 9½ cents, the old domestic price.

* * *

There is now no question but that the last mark-up in steel prices will hold. Indeed, that important raw material, step scrap, has risen again, giving clear evidence of the steel producers anticipation of continued demand. This is confirmed by their preparations to increase open hearth capacity.

An important factor here is the good buying of railway freight cars. A considerable increase in car loadings is anticipated by fall and, if the forecasts are correct, a shortage of equipment would be probable.

Even zinc, where there has recently been some over-production, has felt the improved demand, and its price has just recovered part of the ground lost not long ago.

* * *

Meanwhile, drouth conditions continue, and assure high prices for wheat, corn, hogs, lard, cotton seed oil, etc.

It is significant that the Canadian wheat crop is now estimated to be around only 210,000,000 bushels, and this, with a subnormal carryover of only 130,000,000 bushels, is a factor making for high prices.

My guess is that the practical certainty of higher prices will induce forward buying, and that forward buying will confirm higher prices.

URGE Research PLAN

FOR TOBACCO INDUSTRY

Washington, July 24 (INS)—A broad and thorough research program for the tobacco industry was urged today in a report of the industry studies section of the defunct NRA.

The report, one of a number completed after the recovery agency was declared unconstitutional, stressed the importance of co-ordinated research among the component activities comprising this industry.

Establishment of a tobacco research foundation to afford a common meeting ground for scientists, economists and business men was recommended.

"A way must be found to bring all the elements together in the public interest," the report asserted. "Exact knowledge would displace rule of thumb methods.

"Into research would go the questions of taxation, problems of growing, curing, aging and grading of tobacco, efficiencies of production methods, technological explorations and determinations, distribution and advertising problems, the development at home and abroad of new markets and the reviving of old, the charting of future trends and future dangers that research foresight might point the way to avoid. These are the rough essentials of the work of a tobacco research foundation."

The report expressed amazement that the tobacco industry, which is characterized as of high importance in the nation's economic life should have gone for so long without such a research program.

"Tobacco today provides the South Atlantic States an agricultural income greater than that from cotton," the report continued.

"It ranks first in other important farming areas. In dollar value, tobacco ranks second among agricultural commodities exported. Its manufactured product is worth a billion dollars wholesale. The labor employed is both white and black, North and South, union and non-union. No other manufactured product furnishes so large a proportion of the national governmental revenue."

Dividend

Directors of Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of 62½ cents a share, payable August 5 to stockholders of record July 28. This is an increase of 12½ cents over the previous dividend.

The following is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in the Offering Prospectus and the Registration Statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein. The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds.

THE COMPANY The New York Edison Company, Inc., all of the stock of which, except 2 shares, is owned by Consolidated Edison Company of New York, Inc., was incorporated in New York on August 1, 1935, as a consolidation of The New York Edison Company and The United Electric Light and Power Company. The Company is engaged in the distribution and sale of direct and alternating current electricity to consumers in Manhattan and that portion of The Bronx lying west of the Bronx River, New York City. The Company also supplies electricity to certain affiliated electric companies of the Consolidated Edison Company of New York System for distribution outside of the territory served by the Company. The energy is in part purchased from others and in part generated at the Company's own plants. The Company's properties include generating stations, substations and a transmission and distribution system. Practically all of the underground transmission and distribution lines are in conduits rented from an affiliated company.

Consolidated Edison Company of New York, Inc., has applied to the Public Service Commission of the State of New York for the merger into itself of the Company. If and when such merger is effected, the Series E Bonds and other obligations of the Company will become obligations of the Consolidated Edison Company. The Offering Prospectus contains certain information in regard to that Company including certain data as to its business and capitalization and certain consolidated financial statements.

Common Stock—no par value, stated value $50 per share (5,313,999 shares authorized and outstanding of which 2 shares are reserved against scrip of a predecessor)	$265,699,950.00

Does not include $55,000,000 First Mortgage Bonds of The United Electric Light and Power Company, and $1,090,000 matured mortgage bonds of predecessors of the Company, pledged to secure funded debt.*

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The proceeds from the sale of $30,000,000 Series E Bonds will, it is estimated, aggregate $30,000,000 (exclusive of accrued interest), and will be applied to the redemption on October 1, 1936, at 105% and accrued interest, of $30,000,000 Series A Bonds issued under the First Lien and Refunding Mortgage. The balance required for such redemption plus the Company's estimated expenses in connection with the sale of the Series E Bonds, together aggregating approximately $1,829,500 (exclusive of accrued interest on the Bonds to be redeemed), will be obtained from the Company's current cash.

EARNINGS The statements as to earnings for 1933, 1934 and 1935 in the Offering Prospectus, subject to the related notes and other important relevant information, indicate that in each of these years the Gross Corporate Income of the Company together with that of its two predecessors available for fixed charges, after deducting provisions for Federal income taxes and for "retirement expense", was more than three times such fixed charges in each of such years. Reference is made to the Offering Prospectus for a summary of unaudited Profit and Loss Statements for the three months' and twelve months' periods ended March 31, 1935 and 1936; for the three months' period of 1936 both Gross and Net Corporate Income show reductions from the figures reported for the corresponding period of 1935. The Offering Prospectus also contains consolidated profit and loss statements of Consolidated Edison Company of New York, Inc.

SERIES E BONDS The Series E Bonds will be issued under the First Lien and Refunding Mortgage of The New York Edison Company, assumed by the present Company, as amended and supplemented, and, in the opinion of counsel for the Company, will be secured by a lien on all the distributing systems and franchises and substantially all the real estate, including generating stations, now owned by the Company, subject to the liens, so far as they attach, of mortgages securing outstanding indebtedness of $39,343,511.74. The Mortgage is also, in the opinion of counsel, secured by pledge of $55,000,000 First Mortgage Bonds of The United Electric Light and Power Company, one of the Company's predecessors, and the latter bonds are secured by a first lien on the distributing system and franchises and substantially all the real estate, including generating stations, formerly owned by the United Company as the same existed prior to August 1, 1935.

Bonds of Series A and D are now secured by the lien of the Mortgage. The Mortgage permits the issuance of additional bonds which also would be secured equally thereby.

Upon retirement of the Series A Bonds or due provision therefor, a Supplemental Indenture dated February 27, 1936 will amend the "after acquired property" clause of the Mortgage so that with respect to property acquired by the Company or a successor after February 29, 1936, such clause will subject to the lien of the Mortgage only electrical transmission or distribution lines or systems (but not generating stations) located in the territory now served by the Company's distribution system.

The Mortgage provides for the release, in certain instances, without notice to bondholders of property covered thereby, including the release for cancellation, upon retirement of the outstanding bonds of The New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, of the above $55,000,000 of United Company bonds.

The Mortgage contains provisions permitting its modification, in any particular, with the approval of the holders of 75% in amount of outstanding bonds, subject to certain limitations.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated has agreed to purchase these Bonds from the Company at 100%, or a total of $30,000,000, plus accrued interest and has arranged for the sub-underwriting of a portion thereof. Such Bonds are to be offered to the public at 102%, or a total of $30,600,000, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discount is 2%, or a total of $600,000.

Price 102% and Accrued Interest

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated have agreed to purchase these Bonds when, as and if issued, and accepted by them and subject to the approval of their counsel, Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed. The validity of the franchises and titles of the Company, and certain other matters, have been passed upon by counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of the Bonds in temporary form, exchangeable for definitive Bonds when prepared, will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about July 29, 1936, against payment therefor in New York funds.

Reference is made to the Offering Prospectus, for the terms and conditions of the underwriting and the offering of the Bonds and for a statement regarding sub-underwriting agreements, which, among other things, authorize Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated to purchase and sell Bonds, in the open market or otherwise, either for long or short account, for the respective accounts of itself and the sub-underwriters, during the period and within the limits set forth in such agreements.

Further information, particularly financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable only from such of the undersigned as are registered dealers in securities in this State.

HOME LOANS

Bay State BANKS SET Records

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

All doubters of the growing volume of home building and home purchases in the Bay State are referred to the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League for proof that is indisputable.

Judge Ralph M. Smith, president of the league, cites as evidence the June record of co-operative banks in this state when loans of more than $4,280,000 were made to home-owners.

This is the largest monthly total in at least six years and is nearly $1,000,000 more than the amount loaned in June, 1935. In order to show the real significance of such figures, Judge Smith supplies figures showing that upwards of 17,000 families of the state were represented in this financing. While practically every section shows a gain, the best percentage increases are noted in Boston, Brockton, Worcester, Springfield and Pittsfield.

* * *

The Eastern Massachusetts Street Company report is at hand today and it continues to show the improvement which the big suburban transit line has been making over a period of many months. First item to catch our eye is the net income of $6062 shown for the month; contrasted with a loss of $29,079 reported in June, 1935. Thus there was an earnings turnover of $35,141 in lifting from red to black ink. The remarkable feature is that this was accomplished on a gain in railway operating revenues of $47,585. Further than that it was accomplished in the face of increased operating expenses, higher taxes and a reduction in other income.

* * *

Notebook: After perusal of the sound trends discerned in Eastern's monthly income statement we can do nothing more than reiterate our bullishness on the company's securities . . . And suggest to readers who followed our recommendations on the bonds over the last two years that now is the time to look over some of the junior securities . . . Such as the first and second preferreds . . . Paine Webber's market letter today contains a most interesting sidelight on the rails . . . When it points out the group has always advanced from June-July into the autumn months . . . During election years since 1900.

* * *

The most interesting feature of recent markets, besides the action of the rail group noted here yesterday, is the behavior of bonds as depicted by the Associated Press averages. For two weeks now they have been telling a dull story. And, while it may not be of more than passing importance, this loss of pep in the lien department coincides with the less satisfactory performance of equities. Improvement in this department along with better rail action really seem needed in here to keep things humming. Either that or traders must soon prepare themselves for a reaction more serious than anything seen to date.

* * *

Squibs: However, to us it seems of little consequence how much or how sharply the market can or will react . . . For the trend seems definitely higher and until there are serious implications that the underlying factors promoting the rise have been impaired we will continue to build up a long account . . . In addition to the issues noted here yesterday as likely looking mediums for funds we want to add a few more today . . . New York Central, Curtis Wright "A," National Department Stores, Cleveland Graphite, General Cable "A" and common, American Smelting, Kennecott, Southern Pacific, Southern Rail preferred and American Sugar.

STOCKS Prices Turn MIXED

TRADING PACE MODERATE

New York, July 24 — The stock market turned in a highly irregular performance today with trading at a moderate pace. The list started slightly higher, slipped off under light profit taking and then came back under lead of steels. Plus and minus signs in pivotal issues were equally divided.

Rails and coppers were higher. Utilities and aviations were mixed although Douglas jumped more than 2. Oils slipped somewhat.

Current Topics

Recent liveliness of the merchandising shares was reflected in the week-end surveys which found most wholesale markets crowded with buyers preparing for what is expected to be the best autumn business in several years.

Consumer purchasing was said to have resounded with the return of more normal temperatures in most parts of the country. Greater distribution of house furnishings, hardware and groceries was noted. It was estimated that retail sales exceeded last year's totals by 12 to 18 per cent.

Helpful to market sentiment also was the statement of the Labor Department disclosing that 58,000 more workers were returned to jobs during June, bringing aggregate employment to the highest level since October, 1930.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions the French franc was down 00 7-16 of a cent at 6.60⅜ cents, and sterling was ⅛ of a cent easier at $5.01⅞.

BOND MARKET Mostly Higher

New York, July 24 (INS)—Demand for second-grade rail liens was the feature of an irregularly higher bond market in forenoon trading today. Price changes were generally of small proportions and volume of trading only moderate.

Comments of Brokers

Should the market fail to respond to the advancing movement in the steel group that is under way, we would be inclined to construe this as an unfavorable technical indication.—R. S. Fergus—Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

Leadership of the market from here may well be assumed by the rails and "durable goods" stocks, particularly rail equipments, steels, electrical equipments and building and construction groups. —H. D. Comer—Paine, Webber & Co.

Although a technical correction is a logical expectation after the extended rise, the market gives little indication of being tired and as long as business continues to resist the normal seasonal decline the line of least resistance seems to favor the constructive side.—W. T. Hyde, Jr., Josephthal & Co.

The resumption of the advance in the latter part of yesterday's trading, in our opinion, indicates that still higher prices are in prospect before an important technical reaction comes about.—B. Grant-Hornblower & Weeks.

In view of the increasing reactionary sentiment in the Street any bulge that results may be utilized for lightening trading accounts but that it will bring any more important offerings than witnessed over the last several weeks is doubtful. —J. P. Maher-Shields & Co.

Steel Employment At New High

New York, July 24 (AP)—Despite wide application of policies of mechanization and technological improvements, the steel industry reached this year a new high point in employment, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported today.

Using records of the census of manufactures of the Commerce Department as a basis of calculation, the Institute asserted that employment in the industry rose sharply in the last 60 years leading all other manufacturing industries.

"In 1879," says the survey, "a total of 140,798 wage earners were employed in blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills, the census figures show. In May of this year almost 492,000 were employed in iron and steel plants, of whom 445,800 were wage-earning employes.

"Employment in the industry this spring exceeds the number at work in 1929, when total employment was estimated at 460,000 on the basis of the number of wage earners shown for that year in the census."

INDUSTRIAL INDICES UP

New York, July 24 (AP) — Most branches of trade progressed energetically this week, aided by broadening retail distribution and active preparations for fall, according to Dun & Bradstreet. More comfortable shopping weather was reported.

"Most of the wholesale markets were crowded with buyers," the agency stated, "whose orders were more generous than since 1929. As fewer schedules were abbreviated because of the heat, factory operations were widened, with heavy goods divisions the strongest factor in maintenance of the higher summer level."

It [illegible] ed higher, the review said. [illegible] the output, bituminous coal production, steel operations and freight car loadings were among others forging ahead. Lumber production expanded 10 per cent.

* * *

"The return of more normal temperatures," the report declared, "was accompanied by a decided rebound in consumer buying from the rather restricted proportions during the heat wave of the two weeks preceding. Interest was extended to a wider variety of merchandise, which included more house furnishings, furniture, hardware and groceries.

"Stocks of women's sportswear, cotton dresses and men's lightweight suits nearly were cleared at some stores. Dry goods received increasing attention, as did millinery."

The volume of retail distribution for the country as a whole was estimated to have exceeded the same week last year by 12 to 18 per cent. Percentage increases in the more important geographical region follow: New England, 15 to 20; East, 12 to 17; Middle West, 18 to 22; Northwest, 12 to 17; South, 15 to 18, and Pacific Coast, 18 to 25.

* * *

The review said orders booked for fall merchandise ranged from 20 to 35 per cent over the comparative period in 1935. Increased prices or imminent upward revisions were partly responsible for the generous covering of furniture, hardware some textile lines and groceries, the agency said.

MONEY THESIS

Revive STABILIZATION Talk

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1936, Universal Service)

New York, July 24 — Monetary theorists, using plausible words, seek to slip over covert policies without clarifying precisely what is involved.

For example, there is a revival of pious talk about international stabilization.

Behind the maneuver is an assumption that money manipulation has a strange power to create trade. As a matter of fact, beneficial trade grows out of a physical exchange of goods (or services) and is little more than a refinement of the barter process.

Under the banner of a restoration of an international gold standard there is the hope, too, of furtively restoring a trend toward free trade and unrestricted international [illegible]

It [illegible] of monetary [illegible] international [illegible] [illegible] major [illegible]

[illegible] heated [illegible] whether [illegible] without [illegible] standing of the practical implication of such [illegible]. My own view is that international economic policy should be definitely subordinated to the needs of the home economy.

Strangely enough in the last five years Great Britain heretofore the most internationally minded of the principal countries, has definitely pursued a policy of giving first consideration to the creation of a balanced domestic economy. This has not only meant turning from comparative free trade to tariff protection, but has also signified a cessation of free and unrestricted international lending. In both respects, these innovations entail a reversal of traditional British policy, under which London was long a free and unrestricted factor in trade and finance.

Over here, the suggestion by the opposition candidate for the presidency or the desirability for the creation of a banking commission to [illegible] out questions of financial reform is promising. In my view, the foundation of a sound money system is a good commercial banking setup, based on self-liquidating paper growing out of trade. Under such a conception, speculative and capital loans would be made by other agencies, such as investment trusts and savings banks.

"THE BOY CASTAWAYS" BY JULES VERNE

SYNOPSIS

Fourteen boys, ranging in ages from 8 to 14, and the Negro cabin boy, Moko, were about to enjoy a vacation cruise aboard the yacht Slought, when, late on the night of February 14, 1860, it loses its moorings and is blown far out to sea from Auckland, New Zealand.

After more than three stormy weeks on the South Pacific ocean, the Slought is tossed on a strange shore as the climax of a terrific storm on March 10, 1860. The boys (excepting Moko) are pupils of the Chatman Boarding School, named: Gordon, an American, age 14; Briant, 13, and his younger brother, Jack; Doniphan and his cousin, Cross, 11; Baxter, 13; Webb, Wilcox, Garnett and Service, each about 12; Jenkins and Iverson, 9, and Dole and Costar, just past 8.

They are now engaged in exploring their strange haven; whether they are on an island is still a question. Early in April they discover a man's skeleton and his long-abandoned cave home, also his watch, utensils, an inscription dated "F. B., 1807," and—most important of all—a map of the island, drawn by one Francois Baudoin, who evidently had been cast ashore there.

The boys decide to move into the cave as winter is on the way and the Slought is being worn away by the wash of the sea. Having stripped the yacht of her remaining useful parts, they fully themselves on a raft up the river to the cave, now called French Den, where they pass the night.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"No," said Cross. "Still, there must be a place to do the cooking."

"I will make a place outside," answered Moko.

"That won't be easy in the bad weather," replied Briant. "I think that the first thing to do tomorrow is put the cooking stove right here."

"The cooking stove, in the same place where we eat and sleep?" asked Doniphan, in a tone of disgust.

"Well, you'll have to use smelling salts, Lord Donphan!" replied Service, who laughted outright.

"Well, well!" interrupted Gordon, "Whether it's agreeable or not, we'll have to get used to it. Besides, the stove will warm the cave. We will have all winter to dig more rooms in the chalky walls. But first of all, let's take French Den as it is and establish ourselves here the best way we can."

• • •

The bunks were arranged in rows on the sandy floor. Although they were close together, those children, used to the narrowness of the ship's cabins, did not consider it uncomfortable.

This settling down occupied the boys until the end of the day. The big table from the yacht was placed in the center of the cave and Garnett, helped by the little ones who were bringing in the utensils, set the table for dinner.

Moko and Service did excellent work. A fire was built between two big stones at the foot of the counterfort of the cliff, and fed with dry wood brought by Webb and Wilcox. A soup was made with the meat biscuits. There also were a dozen partridges, carefully plucked and cleaned and threaded on a thin iron rod which were roaste dover a dripping pan.

Before seven o'clock they all gathered in the one room of French Den. They sat on the stools, folding chairs, wicker chairs and benches of the Slought while Moko served a substantial meal. The steaming soup, a piece of corned beef, the roasted partridges, biscuits, and a piece of Chester cheese made up for the rather mean menu of the last few days.

Whatever the gravity of the situation, the young ones gave way to the joyfulness of their age and Briant was far from trying to dampen their joy or to stop their laughter.

The day had been very tiring. Everybody was ready to rest, but Gordon proposed that they first pay a visit to the last resting place of Francois Baudoin, for whom they felt a kindly comradeship in occupying his home.

Night was falling and the horizon of the lake reflected the last rays of the day when the young boys stopped near a slight mound on which was a little wooden cross. There, the young ones kneeling, the older ones bowed in front of this tomb and prayed to God for the soul of the castaway.

By nine o'clock the bunks were occupied and shortly after, buried under their blankets, they were sleeping. Wilcox and Doniphan, who were on watch, kept up a good fire at the opening of the cave to keep away improper visitors and to warm up the interior.

The next day, May 9th and the three days that followed, the unloading of the raft required all hands. The rain continued to pitch or under the western winds, indicating rain or snow.

The temperature did not rise much above zero centigrade, and the high zones were considerably colder. It was important, therefore, that everything liable to be damaged by frost should be stored in French Den.

Because of the importance of the work to be done, the hunters did not go far. But water game abounded, and Moko was never left without provisions. Snipe, ducks and teal gave Doniphan the chance to make some fine bags.

However, Gordon worried what the hunt, even though successful, cost in lead and powder. He was anxious to save the munitions. Therefore, he warned Doniphan to be sparing in his gunshot.

"It's in the interest of our future," he said to him.

"Quite right," answered Doniphan. "But we also have to be sparing of our canned goods. We'd be sorry not to have them if we ever had the means of leaving the island."

"Leaving the island!" exclaimed Gordon. "Can we—construct a boat that would hold at sea?"

"And why not, Gordon, if there's a continent in the neighborhood? In that case, I'm not anxious to die here as the French-man did."

"All right!" said Gordon. "But before thinking of leaving we must get used to the idea that perhaps we'll be forced to live here for years and years."

"Certainly, if we can't do anything else!"

"Well, Gordon, I don't think you'll get many followers of that idea, not even your good friend, Briant!"

"We can discuss that later," answered Gordon, "but let me tell you, Doniphan, that you are not fair to Briant. He's a good comrade who has proved his devotion."

"Well, well, Gordon, even so!" answered Doniphan in a sarcastic tone. "Briant has all the qualities! He's a hero!"

"No, Doniphat; he has his faults like all of us. But your feeling against him might cause a row which would make our situation worse than it is! Briant is well thought of by all of us. . ."

"Oh! All of us!"

"Or at least most of us. I don't know why Wilcox, Cross, Webb and you will not hear anything from him! I'm telling you this, by the way, Doniphan, and I'm sure that you'll think about it."

"It's already thought, Gordon."

Gordon Worries

Gordon saw that the proud boy was little disposed to take his advice, a fact which caused him some anxiety, as he could foresee serious trouble.

The only thing now left to do after the rain was unloaded was to break up the frame and the platform. The beams and the planks could be used in French Den.

Unfortunately, all the materials could not be stored in the cave, and, if it proved impossible to make it larger, they would have to construct a shelter to cover the bales in bad weather. Meantime, following the advice of Gordon, everything was placed in the angle of the counterfort and covered up with tarred sheeting.

On the 13th, Baxter, Briant and Moko set up the forge and on which they had to be used to roll rollers. It was put against the right wall, near the opening, to help the draught of the fire. It was too much trouble to put in the pipes to carry away the smoke.

However, Baxter was able to pierce a hole in the wall, chalky wall, through which the pipe was adjusted to carry the smoke outside. When Moko lit the stove it functioned nicely. The opening was assured even in bad weather.

During one of these excursions Doniphan, Webb, Wilcox and Cross, over the Service, satisfied their hunting desires. One day they went through the forest to a point half a mile from French Den, all on the lake. A few indications of human work were noticed. There were pits dug into the soil, covered with branches, and there remained the bones of animals which fell into them could not get out.

The state of these pits indicated that they dated from this years back and one of them contained the remains of an arrow, the species of which it would have been difficult to recognize.

"These are the remains of a very large animal," observed Wilcox, who had let himself down in the pit and examined the bones with the help of his gun.

"It's certain," said Doniphan, "that this animal must have been very strong. Look at the size of its jaws, and the enormous fangs. If this animal came to life again, I don't think we'd like it."

"You think, then," Webb asked Doniphan, "that this was a carnivorous animal?"

"Yes, I don't doubt it."

"If not a tiger or a lion," answered Doniphan, "at least a jaguar or a cougar."

"We'll have to be careful and keep watching," said Webb.

"Do you hear that, Phann?" Service said to the dog. "There are some big beasts near here."

Rickrack on Linen Charms Congress

DELPHINIUM BLUE rickrack—the most naive trimming in the world—outlines the very youthful details of a pure, nubbed white linen sports frock. It won a Fashion Congress tag. And well it might have, for good, old-fashioned rickrack has become the pet of the sophisticate this season. It trims cotton bathing suits, evening things and even some darling daytime bonnets.

Any sort of summer resort event you can think of would be decorated by this frock-let. Add the widest white cartwheel that'll stay on your head and toeless linen sandals. Or printed linen sandals which pick up the shade of the rickrack and heighten it with a giddy color contrast. Frock around ten dollars.

"Anthony Adverse" Continues

By N. F. T.

Quite like the original printed opus, meaning not anything skimpy, the radio dramatized version of "Anthony Adverse" needs adequate space and time to get itself across properly.

Hence the second setting (WNAC) of the famous Hervey Allen story, to be a highlight during the Louella Parsons broadcast known as "Hollywood Hotel" when it comes out of California between 9 and 10 o'clock this evening.

CLASSY CAST

Leading parts in the cast, which is said to be one of the classiest ever assembled for radio drama, include Claude Rains, Olivia de Havilland and Donald Woods.

"N. F. T."

What's more, the story might not even continue with tonight's turn. That would mean still another "mike" installment for next Friday evening. Not bad news at all. As usual, the musical and vocal program portion rests with personable Dick Powell, ever Frances Langford and the rhythmic Raymond Paige orchestra.

Later in local network news developments is yesterday's grant by the Federal Radio Commission, issuing permission for increased power to 5000 watts for Station WMEX hereabouts.

All of which means increased activity apparently by the program planning personnel of said station. Also a more important status in Boston outlets in the latter's estimation.

At present the Brookline avenue outlines are shaping some truly splendid show material, with the proprietors William and Al Pote naturally exhibiting high enthusiasm. Their keyed up spirit is likewise reflected in full measure by "Bud" Riley, the program director.

To date WMEX has figured in numerous outstanding network affairs, having carried both major political conventions, as well as the acceptance addresses of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Landon.

Additional power and the attending wider range are regarded by the management as the asset that will result in still bigger and better things all around for the WMEX loudspeaker patrons. In short, there's real significance in saying—more power to them!

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

LOVELY ARMS and shoulders are the distinction of truly beautiful women, but beauty more often than not is a work of art and exercise. Slim shoulders, rounded arms and a firm, high bustline can all be developed.

The muscular network of the shoulders, arms and bust is so interrelated that, in beautifying exercises, they may be be treated as a unit. Firm, rounded arms are not found with a scrawny chest, nor collarbone hollows with lovely bust contour. If one part is beautiful, all are beautiful.

Exercises which move the arms at the shoulders tone the supporting muscles of the bust, firm the upper arms and fill out the collarbones and curve of the shoulders. The muscles which cover this entire girdle arise in the shoulder and are inserted in the upper arm. Exercise, therefore, which moves the arms at the shoulders, beautifies the entire upper portion of the body.

FOR SHOULDER GIRDLE

To strengthen the pectoral muscles and elevate the bust, firm the triceps muscles and take up the slack on the underside of the upper arm, the following exercise is most affective.

Position: Arms held at chest level in front of the body, right fist placed against the palm of the left hand.

Movement: Exerting a force and resistance action, push against the hand, first to one side and then to the other. Do this exercise slowly and forcefully, repeating 12 times.

To add in chest expansion there is nothing better than the old army exercise.

Movement: To the count of 12, raise the arms from the shoulders to overhead and back to the sides at shoulder level. Relax. Now, extend the arms straight out in front of the body, and to the count of 12 raise the arms overhead and back to position.

To soften the line of the collarbone, arouse the circulation in this area by using the palm of the hand in a rhythmic stroke, bringing the left hand down from the right shoulder, the right hand stroking the left shoulder. If you do this for 50 counts, the tissues should feel warm and tingly. This exercise, if done regularly, will repay you well.

Finish this with elevating exercise. Rise on the toes and bring the arms up from the sides to shoulder level. Repeat for 50 counts

Corn Cob Recipe

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast over Station WMEX

Corn, particularly, should be cooked as soon after picking as possible and buying at a reliable stand assures us of a short time between picking and eating. The methods of cooking corn vary—some like to place corn in cold water, bring water to boiling point and simmer gently for one minute to have corn that is tender and delicate. Others boil the ears 8-15 minutes depending upon size and age. Or there is a new method recommended by George Rector. The husks are left on the ears after the inner covering of silk has been removed and these are then cooked gently in boiling water.

A NEW WAY TO COOK CORN-ON-THE-COB

Remove the outer husks, turn back inner husks, and remove silk. A small dry vegetable brush is helpful in removing the stubborn silks. Turn back husks around corn, place in large kettle. Cover with cold water for 10 or 15 minutes. Pour off water, cover, cook over medium heat until corn gets hot. Turn heat very low and continue cooking 15 to 25 minutes, depending on tenderness of corn. Remove husks and serve with salt, pepper and butter.

CORN-OFF-THE-COB

6 ears of corn
½ cup of butter
Pinch of soda, dissolved in ½ cup of water
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons salt
Pepper

Remove the husks from the corn Cut the corn from the cob as closely as possible. Brown the butter slightly and add to it the corn and seasonings. Cover and let cook until the corn is tender, about 20 to 30 minutes. Serves 4.

Blackberries, gooseberries, currants and strawberries have practically disappeared from market counters, but raspberries still hold sway and blueberries are coming in more abundantly to be enjoyed mostly in blueberry pie, pudding and cake. To make cake simply add one to two cups blueberries to a standard one or two egg cake If it's to be eaten hot with plenty of butter as in the olden days use the one egg cake; for keeping use the two egg cake and bake in muffin shape. Try this blueberry cobbler pie from the cookbook of the new vegetable shortening. It uses brown sugar and vinegar to give zestful flavor to the berries.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Disaster Always Certain When Cupid Takes the 'Wheel of Life'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Love is like a high-powered automobile. You've got to steer love, keep it running on the safe and travelled lanes. Otherwise, you're due for a quick trip through the fence into the river.

The man or woman who substitutes the heart for the brain moves as surely toward disaster as does the automobile with the blind man at the wheel. There's no stopping, once Cupid gets out of the back seat. It's straight ahead from then on, and all the red lights, warnings and signals that were ever thought of won't help you a mite.

Life's greatest mistake is man's willingness to follow love's every whim, to pursue each new heart interest with deadly determination. The brakes must be applied, not once, but a thousand times between the ages of 16 and a hundred. And there never were better brakes than the average common sense centered in your head and mine.

If every man and woman would this very day resolve to love once and think a dozen times before loving again, there would be such a drop in divorce, crime and allied disasters that even the wisest couldn't guess what happened to the country.

These thoughts were inspired by "John of Reading", who sends me this interesting letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I love my wife. I married her when she was 18 and I 21. For 20 years we've lived together, having the usual amount of differences but always managing to overcome them. We were the typical couple, independent, satisfied and well-to-do.

Then, from nowhere, arrives this widow. I saw her. She saw me. We fell in love, desperately —hopelessly. It was as simple and tragic as that.

But the future, there's nothing "simple" about that. My wife having given the best years of her life to me cannot be cast aside. Neither can my children, now in school, be made to look after themselves.

I realize all this now because I am at home. An hour hence, in the company of the young widow, I shall become an entirely different man. In her presence, my wife, my children, my home will be as nothing. And I shall think of only the happiness the future will hold if I but have the courage to dare follow the promptings of my heart.

Miss Fairfax, a man should settle his own problems. That's what I've always said. Yet, now I'm not so sure.

Shall I divorce my wife, give a liberal part of my property to her and the children, and start life anew with the one I love more than I ever believed it possible to love?

Or shall I strangle this love, weaken myself to my miserable fate and settle down to discontended old age?

JOHN OF READING.

MY DEAR FRIEND:

Loves such as you are now experiencing are mighty apt to be serial affairs. Divorce your wife, marry this widow and you will be courting and hoping to wed a third woman before you are 50. That's the way it usually goes.

My advice to you—and if you're wise you'll take it—is GIVE YOURSELF A GOOD HARD PINCH AND WAKE UP. Your happiness is with the wife you have and the children who bear your name. Your happiness is decidedly not with every attractive stranger who approaches, smiles and gives that ageing heart of yours an extra beat.

A man cannot live 20 years with a woman without becoming dependent on her in a thousand different manners. A man cannot be the father of children without loving those children and finding them as necessary a part of his life as the food he eats and the water he drinks. No man, and you're no exception, can erase two decades of living as a teacher might the drawing on the blackboard.

If you are sensible, you will see just as little as possible of this attractive widow. That is the most effective way to treat your particular brand of "heart trouble."

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX—

The year after my first wife died, my daughter received a visit from a girl who was her school friend. We fell in love, or at least I did, but now that we are married, I'm beginning to doubt how much she cares for me.

When we spend our evenings at home, she is all that any wife could be expected to be. But if I go out to dinner, or the widow dies me into taking her to a dance, it seems to me she is much more charming to young men than she is to me.

I see her chatting and laughing on the other side of the table at dinners sometimes, and I really feel murderous.

MY DEAR FRIEND:

Haven't you allowed yourself to become a little morbid with jealousy? And if you continue, isn't it likely to wreak any chance you have for future happiness? When married couples are invited out to dinner, they are supposed, by the usages of good society, to make themselves agreeable to dinner partners; and not to dance exclusively with each other, when they go to dances.

The difference in your ages has caused you to imagine things which do not exist. Let me beg of you to be reasonable.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 87

MY MENTAL barometer traveled rapidly toward the "storm area" as Mother Graham said that the small boys and Katie must know nothing of my father's plan.

It was one thing to convince my father and my husband that I could rely upon the sense of honor and the discretion of Junior, Roderick and Katie. It was something else again to win my mother-in-law's approval of a course against which she already had set herself.

It was a hopeless task, I decided—in the fraction of a second given me to decide anything. For my mother-in-law is not a woman to be kept waiting when she has asked a question. I would not waste a second's time, or risk arousing her anger by disputing her.

I hated to deceive her, and worse, to see to it that Junior, Roderick and Katie kept their knowledge of the situation from her. But, knowing her capacity for long drawn out and bitter controversy, there was no other course for me but to follow that threadbare old maxim: "What she doesn't know won't hurt her."

MOTHER GRAHAM SHREWD

I tried to make my voice matter-of-fact as I answered her

"That is the wise course," I said, hoping the concession would satisfy her. But she shot a keen glance at me from her shrewd old eyes.

"I'm glad you think so," she said. "Are you going to follow it?"

"Oh! I see your plan!" she exclaimed with enthusiasm making her voice tremulous. "You want me to play cribbage with this twin brother of your father's seated where your father and I always sit, so that if anyone is sent to the farm to spy, he can be convinced that your father has never left his home."

"That is the plan exactly," I told her. "There's only one obstacle."

"What is that?"

"He may not know how to play cribbage."

"Pouf!" She snapped her fingers and shrugged her shoulders in a Gallic gesture. "You can keep the curtains closed for a night or two. By that time I'll have him taught so that no one watching would know he was not a past master of the game."

I rose abruptly. It was a good time to leave, I told myself, while she was still filled with enthusiasm for the part she was to play in the bizarre drama we expected to enact in the next few weeks.

WILLING TO HELP

"I knew I could count on you, Mother," I said warmly. "And now I must run along to tell Katherine and Mary about it. If you think of anything that will make my—uncles stay here more plausible, tell me about it, won't you?"

"I shall put my wits to work," she cooed earnestly, "and will let you know promptly anything I've evolved. But we all shall have to walk warily so that ape of a Katie and the boys won't suspect anything."

If my anxiety for my father had not been so keen, I should have had hard work to control my risibles at my mother-in-law's attitude. She was delicious in her assumption that she was now the directing spirit in this new adventure, and her insistence that I follow her caution concerning Katie and the boys.

NEEDS KATHERINE'S HELP

But with the fear for my father obsessing me, I was able to say soberly, "I'll be careful," and to get myself out of the room before she thought of some other admonition.

I left her palpably "putting her wits to work," and went down the hall to the nursery, experiencing an absurd qualm at the prospect that Katherine's disapproval of the manner in which we had e- ted the boys might still [illegible] to [illegible]

I told myself, with a touch of unprofitable hysteria, that if Katherine's usual calm cheeriness failed me, it would be the traditional "last straw," and if the "camel's back" of my determination were not actually broken, it would be so weakened as seriously to impair my usefulness to my father in this crisis.

Care of Skin During Summer

POSED BY MARCIA LEAF

AMONG the rather annoying skin blemishes is a condition called Vitiligo. It is characterized by a partial privation of color in spots with a tendency to increase in size and is sometimes called Piebald skin or leucoderma (white patches).

Some of our readers who have this affliction have frequently asked for the cause and a remedy for it and now we are having requests for something that will cover up the spots and protect them from sunburn.

Because of the lack of pigment these spots, when exposed to the sun, are quite likely to become painfully burned even before the surrounding areas are effected.

Skin specialists and other physicians tell us the cause of this malady is unknown.

This is in no way a curative, but merely a means of matching the white spots to the normal skin and also protecting it from sunburn.

She uses a very weak solution of Potassium Permanganate to paint the spots. Potassium Permanganate is used as an antiseptic and disinfectant and when the crystals are dissolved in water it will make a beautiful purple solution, but will stain the skin brown. This stain is quite permanent and will not wash off for some time, but a solution to match the skin would have to be very weak and as the lady says a very pale lavender.

Then she takes a little brush and paints the spots. It will turn darker afterwards so do not expect to see much change when it is first applied. She says her druggist mixed the solution for her and it was almost colorless but of rather an orchid tinge. This she says enables her to go bathing and appear in public without embarrassment.

Now I would suggest that you use your sunburn oils on the spot and never expose the skin to the sun too long at one time. The following sunburn lotion is nice and not oily:

Tannic acid..... 5.00
Salol 3.00
Alcohol 50 pc..... 100.00

You may have my advice on Sunburn and how to protect the skin during the summer. Simply address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

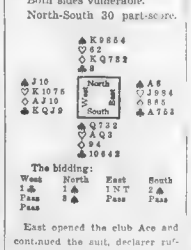
Management Of Entry

The difficulties of inexperienced declarers very often arise from the fact that they cannot find sufficient entries, in dummy or their own hand, to meet the special needs of a situation.

At other times the entries are there but are fruitlessly dissipated by the player himself. The latter was the case in the hand described below.

West dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
North-South 30 part-score.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♣	1♠	1 NT	2♣
Pass	3♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

East opened the club Ace and continued the suit, declarer ruffing the second round. A low spade was then led to dummy's Queen, East ducking with the Ace. Instead of offering thanks that the Queen had proved an entry, laying over the Ace, declarer now wasted one of his precious opportunities to lead up to his auxiliary diamond suit, choosing to continue trumps instead. It should have been obvious that trumps could have been led from either hand, with equal chances of holding the trump loss to one trick. But diamonds had to be established, and the safest and cheapest way to establish them was by leads up to the King-Queen.

East won the second trump lead with the Ace and forced declarer with another club. In desperation, declarer now tried the heart finesse, hoping for two heart tricks for diamondr leads. But when the heart Queen was smothered by West's King and a fourth club came back, taking declarer's last trump, he was through. He could make only one diamond trick, the heart Ace, and dummy's trumps, thus going down one on his contract.

Had declarer led diamonds from the dummy when in with the spade Queen and heart Ace, no defense could have collected more than four tricks.

Will you please outline a calling card for a divorcee, one who has resumed her maiden name?

Since the divorcee has resumed her maiden name, this is the name that she would use on her visiting-cards. She must use a title before her name, and whether she uses Miss or Mrs. depends on which title she has adopted with the return of her maiden name.

WHAT IS BEING DONE?

As guardians of the five world-famous babies Dr. Dafoe, Judge Valin and the Hon. Mr. Croll have had to decide on their religious upbringing. Although the guardians are of three different faiths there has been unanimity on the decision in regard to the quintuplets. The constant contact which the nurses have with the tots must also be taken into consideration.

HOPES DASHED FOR 12,000 AT AMOSKEAG

All hopes of re-employment for the 12,000 idle Amoskeag textile workers in Manchester, N. H. before next December, were dashed today.

The Boston Evening American learned that until the question of jurisdiction is settled in the U. S. Court of Appeals next October nothing can be done toward immediate liquidation—the only hope of the workers.

This means that the 5000 families now existing on relief funds as a result of the closing of the mills, will in all likelihood continue on relief until the courts have ironed out the jurisdiction rights.

The Sabath Congressional Investigating committe hearing which was postponed Thursday to next Tuesday, has been postponed again and will probably be held the week of August 2

VACATION IN EUROPE

Two of the three Amoskeag executives summoned to the hearing are vacationing in Europe and will not be available until that time.

On Tuesday Frederick O. Dumaine, treasurer of the bankrupt mills, and Joseph P. Carney, regional director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, trustees in liquidation, and Referee in Bankruptcy Arthur Black, will visit the mill properties

Despite the appeal as to jurisdiction the trustees are going forward with their tedious task of liquidation. Then in the event the U. S. Court of Appeals upholds the ruling of Judge Sweeney in Federal court that the jurisdiction is in Massachusetts, immediate liquidation can be made

Should the U. S. Court of Appeals, however, hand down an adverse decision and change the jurisdiction to the Federal courts in Concord, N. H, the case will have to be heard over again, consuming many more months.

NOT SIGNED OVER

The Sabath Congressional committee was yesterday presented a notice by a shareholder in the Amoskeag Company, that he had received from a shareholders' protective committee informing him that they would represent him at all liquidation proceedings to protect his rights

The shareholder informed the Sabath committee that he had not signed over any of his rights to this protective committee who stated in their notice

"Your committee was authorized by you to represent you in negotiations relating to the financial reorganization of the company and participate in the liquidation of the company."

$11,370,000 DUE

The financial structure of the Amoskeag Company at present shows that they have roughly $5,000,000, most of this in cash, $2,500,000 due from the government for illegal collection of processing taxes, and the money they will realize from their mill properties which experts say should exceed $8,000,000

There is about $11,370,000 due the bondholders who have prior rights They are assured of 100 cents on the dollar. After the costs of liquidation, trustees fees, court costs and lawyers fees have been deducted the common stockholder will at best get less than five cents on the dollar.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Nothing illustrates better how the patterns of history change than the present news of the bloody fighting in Spain. I said the patterns, but really it would be better to say the colors of the pattern. After all, it doesn't matter whether the checkerboard is to be looked at as red upon black, or black upon red. Communist red or Fascist black.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

For centuries, history has written of revolts and rebellions and civil wars and nearly always in the same pattern. The revolt of the People against the Crown or the Oligarchy or the Aristocracy.

The capture of the Bastille, for instance, or the attack on the Tuileries, or the rise of the Mexican peasantry against Maximilian. The troubled generations of France in the last century, 1830, 1848, 1870, always the Commune against the existing government.

Father Gapon and Bloody Sunday in 1905. The bloodless Portuguese revolution, when Manuel went into exile. The revolt against Alphonso.

Nineteenth Century Pattern of Strife

That was the nineteenth century and early twentieth century pattern of civil strife. The masses against the classes. The democracy against the aristocracy. The republic against the crown.

But nowadays, the course of history is like those two-way falls at St. John, N. B. No sooner had the democratic movement reached its climax with effective revolution at the end of the Great War, than the tide began to turn.

The century of democratic hope and faith and ideals, growing more and more radical with every decade, apparently left the European populace no better satisfied than had the older forms of government. A socialist republic, let alone a popular front communism, were sources of profound dissatisfaction to the genuine democratic republicans, the moderates, the middle class,—in short, the people who do not see why a democratic form of government need necessarily be communistic.

The result has been a constantly growing reaction against the serious spread of the Moscow poison. That was the cause of the Blackshirt March on Rome sixteen years ago, of the short-lived Riviera military dictatorship in Spain, which gave way to the radical Republic. But after only two years, apparently, radical republicanism has proved to be no more peaceful, no more prosperous, than the old regime.

Difficult to Know What Is Happening

It is very difficult, of course, to know what is happening. The radical republic had three premiers in three days, none of whom apparently was strong enough to keep order or stave off the armed revolution.

But even if the situation is topsy-turvy from the 19th century point of view, it is not impossible that the old, old split between the radical and industrial city dwellers who put over the revolution and the conservative country people will still hold good.

Historically, the country side is always traditional, conservative, monarchist and profoundly religious in the old faith. The city proletariat is industrial, socialist, modernist and anti-religious.

Woodrow Wilson's Policy Was Built on Deep Faith

At the turn of the past century, at the beginning of the Great War hardly anyone doubted that the progress of liberal democracy could be halted. Woodrow Wilson's international policy was built on that deep-seated faith. To him the War was being waged to make the world safe for this democracy. Monarchy after monarchy collapsed in this climax to the movement which began with the French Revolution.

Then the pendulum swung, the tide turned. People after people, seeing strong minorities permeated by the Moscow virus, planning to seize power by violence, saw their only safety in armed reaction.

In America, the penetration of the radical ideas has been peaceful but none the less potent and determined. But, in over three years the fruits of American radicalism have proved to be no more satisfactory than those of radicalism abroad.

Our American tradition will see to it that the American protest will take the form of ballots rather than bullets.

LIGHTS Aid Holy Land DRAMA

VIVID SCENES AT EXHIBIT

There lies over that narrow strip of land, known as Palestine, in the light of the setting sun, a cathedral-like hush that is attained only in the holiest of places on this planet.

Such is the atmosphere attained by the Holy Land exhibit created by the Gauci brothers, which is on show now at Horticultural Hall.

With the swelling peals of an organ, as the proper accompaniment, to the scene even the most heathen-like observer is put into an ethereal mood.

Every period of the day is represented in the exhibit. And an individual mood for each. In the light of the rising sun, accomplished by a snap of the button there seems to settle over the miniature panorama of the ancient province the air of industry of a people rising to the work of the day.

Siesta Mood

In the full light of noon the miniature takes on the mood of a siesta. And with the setting of the sun, we can easily imagine the provincial citizens returning to their bed and board from the hillside, weary from the day's labor.

With the light of the street-lamps, it is not hard to imagine the citizenry sitting down to their simple evening repast.

The electrical rays of midnight show a land gone to sleep. And 3 o'clock in the morning brings not a stir of activity.

This strip of land, created in miniature, and right at hand, is where the Holy Family lived and labored. Where their Son was born, and died.

Superb Story

Closing days of the exhibit see no diminution in the number of comments turned in by the large number of visitors, whose appreciation and praise of the marvel continues in as much fervor as in the beginning of the show.

Says Miss Virginia Lee, of 2 Alpine place, vice-president of the Young Peoples Association of Dudley Street Baptist Church:

"It far surpasses any written or pictorial account of the life of the Saviour and the scenic character of the Holy Land."

Miss Dorothy I. Cameron, of 4 Copeland place, Roxbury, member of Tremont Temple Baptist Church said:

"Superb, to say the least, and better than any lecture or play that I have ever witnessed. It is unique in every detail. I feel I have really for the first time appreciated this beautiful land."

Clear Portrayal

"This wonderful sight," commented Mrs. George Webb of 81 Park street, Roxbury, "I would not have missed for anything. It is exactly as we have pictured it, bringing one to days gone by."

To Miss Margaret L. Brown, of 11 Barnard road, West Medford:

"It made the Bible stories more understandable, with the locations and characters portrayed so clearly."

And to Miss Ethel Johnston of 109 Brookings street, Medford, Hillside, it "made many things clear to me that were not so before."

DR. ALDRICH HUNT

3 Insurance Firms Seek Man

Unless death is definitely established in the case of Dr. Eben True Aldrich in missing Waterville fishing town physician, relatives may have to wait about 14 years before they can claim his $40,000 estate.

Ernest Tilson trust officer of the Harvard Trust Company, Cambridge, where the doctor had a safe deposit vault, made this statement today.

Because the bulk of Aldrich's fortune is in annuity policies issued by three insurance companies said Tilson, and because the insurance companies find it less costly to trace down the beneficiary than keep paying annuities, all three companies have joined forces in the search.

Dr. Aldrich, one-time town physician for Waterville vanished on October 2, 1934 leaving no message, no will, nor any indication of what he was going to do. No one is named in any of the annuity policies.

In addition to the annuity policies, which pay about $600 a year there are numerous stocks and bonds and savings bankbooks which had not been checked for interest for several years, Tilson declared.

Two cousins of the missing doctor, Frank M. Aldrich of Centre street, Roslindale, and Miss Flora A. Owen of Luce street, Lowell, are mentioned among heirs-at-law.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

Real Talent, Not Beauty, Wanted By Film Studios

Ann Marsters, feature writer for the Boston Evening American, is back in Boston after a long visit to Hollywood. There she gathered and wrote the series, "Ann Marsters in Hollywood." This is the 47th story of the series.

By ANN MARSTERS

Not so long ago, there were no such things as dramatic schools connected with the movie studios. Now all the studios try to teach their young, inexperienced players how to act before they appear on the screen.

Hinsdell's department is called "the talent laboratory," and in it he has turned out many promising stars. He has a formula for producing stars, and it is this:

"Intelligence, vitality, poise, good taste and right thinking."

If they have these qualities, Hinsdell enjoys teaching them the art of acting. If they haven't—then they should never attempt to act.

Most Important Quality: Individuality

And the most important thing in the training of young players Hinsdell believes, is to preserve their individuality.

"Individuality is what really puts a player across," he said. "I don't believe in putting my people through the 'cookie mould' that most actors go through in the average dramatic school.

"I try to weed out only that which hinders their acting, and leave their other qualities and mannerisms intact.

"But I do insist upon standard speech. Their accent must not be either typically mid-Western, or typically New Yorkish, or typically anything. They must learn to speak clear, plain English."

Hinsdell himself had to learn that. When he first went on the stage he had lived for years in Canada. And he had to study a long time with David Belasco before his accent was broken down completely.

Formerly Associated With Little Theaters

With his experience in acting and producing and directing, Hinsdell must be very valuable to Hollywood—and to the young hopefuls who come to him for training.

For several years he was associated with the Little Theaters throughout the country. I first met him quite a few years ago when he was directing plays at "The Outdoor Players" in Peterboro, N. H. He was and still is a hand one individual with a wonderful sense of humor and with very definite ideas on what it takes to become an actor.

"When a young man or woman steps into my office," he said, "I notice the way he has chosen and assembled his clothes. This person, a young woman, let us say, does not have to be dressed expensively to be in good taste.

"I look for simplicity of dress and of speech. Flowery language and unnecessary frills and ruffles indicate a state of thought. And when you get right down to it, poor taste, carelessness, elaborate dress and speech are all manifestations of thinking.

Vitality Important Adjunct To Acting

"That is why a person's outward appearance can, to a large degree, tell what kind of a thinker he is—thus making the business of analyzing him quite simple."

And another thing that potential stars must have is vitality.

"Vitality," said Hinsdell, "is an indication of good health—and those who undertake acting seriously should be healthy. It also furnishes the vibrant, scintillating spark so necessary to an actor or an actress."

Is it difficult to work with raw material? Hinsdell says no, it isn't—if the raw material has talent.

"I can teach them," he said, "to use what they have, but I can't give them talent. They've either got it or they haven't. And if they haven't, there is no use wasting my time or theirs.

"Robert Taylor is an example of raw material," he continued. "When he came to me he had practically no acting experience. I saw that he had talent, and training fitted him for stardom."

Two of His Pupils Heading For Stardom

Jean Parker is another whom Hinsdell coached for stardom. He is particularly interested, now, in Irene Hervey and Betty Furness—both of whom he believes are destined for stardom.

Hinsdell has a bit of advice for the average movie-struck girl, who wonders about what her chances would be in Hollywood.

"My advice to them," he said, "would be to forget about pictures. Most of them have no talent—they're just mesmerized by that state of mind called 'Hollywood.'

"Of course, to those among them who do have talent and something to give, my advice would be no barrier.

"If that alone would stop them—they wouldn't be worth anything anyway."

Another Hollywood story by Miss Marsters about "Movies in the Making" will appear in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

ROBERT TAYLOR IRENE HERVEY

Here are two well-known film artists who passed through "talent laboratory" and were found excellent material. Ambitious persons must have several requisites before they are accepted at the "laboratory," among them being "vitality, intelligence, poise, good taste and right thinking," Oliver Hinsdell of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer tells Ann Marsters, Boston Evening American feature writer. Shown here are Robert Taylor and Irene Hervey.

Dinners for Forty, But Not One Guest

The banquet to end all banquets, a banquet which nobody attended, was served at Hotel Westminster last night.

It was not until 40 covers had been laid and 40 full course dinners were practically ready to serve, that waiters realized something was amiss. There was not one guest present.

A hasty checkup then showed the affair was planned as a surprise party for Thomas J. Brady, Brookline selectman, but efforts to locate committee members failed.

It was not until midnight that it was finally learned a cancellation until a later date had been made but Monday. Through some error it had not been recorded and the hotel staff went ahead with arrangements in blissful ignorance.

SUICIDE Makes Final REQUEST

'KEEP CHILDREN FROM POISON'

Frederick K. Grossman, 53, Waltham and Cambridge diemaker, killed himself in Plymouth today—his last thought and act devoted to the safety of neighborhood children.

Before inhaling carbon monoxide fumes in his car, he scrawled a farewell note directing police to a package of deadly poison he had left in a field near his Waltham home, a favorite playground of children.

Police found and destroyed it Grossman, formerly the proprietor of a machine shop in Cambridge, disappeared from his home in Lincoln street, Waltham, after drawing a rough will bequeathing his two lots of land to Rev. Albert E. Leroy, a neighbor and retired missionary who had financed and befriended him.

Search Begins

Leroy reported his friend's disappearance to police yesterday and a search was begun.

Early today four Plymouth men, Harold and Bernard Raymond, Bernard Kelsey and Carl Williamson heard the sound of a racing motor in a dead end path off the main Plymouth highway at the foot of Pine Hill, three and one half miles south of the center of the town.

Investigating, they found Grossman dead from carbon monoxide fumes. He had attached a length of garden hose to the exhaust pipe and its end protruded through the floor boards.

On the shelf behind the wheel, this note was found:

"First I wanted to leave no mark of myself, but I forgot something, so I leave my address and my name.

"On my property in Lincoln street in Waltham, just across from the front door of my house on a flat rock you will find a paper bag containing some cyanide of potassium.

"As there are children very nearby and they are accustomed to play there, I want you to look for it and take it away."

Threatened Life

Neighbors said that Grossman had possessed the poison for a year or more and often threatened to take it. It is believed he intended to take it with him when he left home, but drove away after placing it on the rock when he opened the door of his car.

He was a native of Germany and had no relatives here so far as police could learn. Despondency over failure to make a success of his machine shop is believed to have motivated his act. He was to have started work on a new job today.

Braley Ballad Entries Studied

New York, July 24—Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, chairman of the jury of awards for the Berton Braley Ballad competition conducted recently by the Hearst newspapers, met yesterday with other judges to make a final survey of manuscripts entered in this national song tournament.

John W. Green, composer and orchestra leader for Jack Bronley, and Robert Bruce, technical adviser to the judges, were among those attending the meeting.

Dr. Spaeth said announcements of the national winners in the competition were expected to be made in about a week, adding:

"Musical scripts of regional winners in 10 cities where the competition was conducted were played and sung before the judges, who were genuinely astonished at the general excellence of the entries from amateur composers."

Two national cash prizes of $100 each will go to the contestants who have submitted the best music for the lyrics of the two ballads written by Berton Braley. A national radio program will be arranged to give the American public an opportunity to become acquainted with the songs.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

So—the Little Audrey stories are at last seeping into our community. Both New York and Chicago have been Little Audrey-mad for quite some time, now, and the people of those cities simply can't escape hearing at least a dozen Audrey stories a day.

But perhaps there are some of you who haven't the slightest idea what I'm talking about.

Well—I'm talking about Little Audrey, the girl who "laughed and laughed and laughed." And herewith begins a sort of a contest.

Any of you who know some Little Audrey stories, or can think up a few of your own, just send them to me. (Nice, printable ones, please)—and for every one that is printed in this column, you'll receive $2.00.

ANN MARSTERS

Here are a couple of samples—which I hope most of you haven't heard before:

"Little Audrey was out driving with her father and they got a flat tire. Her father was surprised—but Little Audrey laughed and laughed and laughed because SHE heard a man say there was a fork in the road."

Maybe you'll like this one better:

"Little Audrey went out one night and got very tight. And when she went to bed, she looked up at the ceiling and it seemed to be going 'round and 'round. But little Audrey laughed and laughed and laughed because SHE knew that the ceiling was plastered."

Brother Wearing Light Fall Suit

This Audrey person is not a new character, I remember, years and years ago (I think I was about 11) that the world was ringing with Little Audrey stories. We girls used to tell them to each other during recess at school. And for some unaccountable reason, I remember a pretty awful one that goes:

"One day Little Audrey threw her baby brother out the window. Her mother screamed and screamed, but Little Audrey laughed and laughed and laughed because SHE knew her baby brother had on his light fall suit."

One of my faithful contributors, C. H. Spilman, of Boston, has sent in the following true story.

It's about an automobile salesman whose duty it is to call at front doors of residences and ask if you wouldn't like to buy an automobile. His reception is not usually very cordial—but last week in Weston he had quite the opposite experience.

Approaching a large and handsome residence, he pressed the button and almost immediately the door swung open, revealing a trimly dressed maid.

Anyway, It Wasn't Snake in the Grass

"Do come right in," she said. Wondering why, the salesman was ushered into the library and greeted by the lady of the house who said, "Oh, I'm so glad you've come."

The salesman was stunned. He thought something must be wrong somewhere, and he said, "I have stopped in to see if there is any possibility of interesting you in an automobile."

"Yes, yes," she said, "I will be very glad to buy one of your cars if you will go in the living room and chase out the snake that is in there."

It occurred to the salesman to wonder if she were quite sane, but anyway, he made his way to the living room and there, sure enough, hiding under the grand piano, was a snake about two feet long. He dealt with it very bravely and successfully.

The lady thanked him sincerely from the front door. She didn't mention the automobile—but the salesman is going to call again, at some future date.

Rice Building First To Be Air-Conditioned

HEARD ABOUT TOWN—The clock on the Custom House tower was a half hour slow for a full day last week . . . The Rice Building at 10 High st. (the top of which I can glimpse from my window) has a new structure about 25 ft. high on its top which looks like they might be building a penthouse . . . But they aren't . . . It's an air-conditioning affair which will be ready soon . . . It will be the first air-conditioned office building in Boston . . .

Baseball on Mystery Mission to Berlin's Olympics

THE MODERN REVIVAL OF THE ancient Olympics has extended the type and kind of contests beyond the original conceptions of the Greek founders, who just gathered the Hellenic heroes from neighboring states and held a combination religious feast and Scotch picnic games. The ancient Grecian matrons barbecued steers, beat up batter cakes by the wholesale and handed around crocks of fermented grape juice. And the heroes just squatted around publicly gnawing beef bones and straining their tonsils with long pulls from the wine dipper, before putting their stomachs and going at the wrestling, the half-mile, clout each other with armored knuckles or heave the shot.

Austen Lake

* * *

That was the limit of first Olympic vision. But the moderns have installed many novelties like canoeing, soccer and cycling, which would have the ancient founders goggle-eyed with wonder. There are a lot of hybrid sports, too, which mystify even the sportsmen of our modern times, like field handball, which is on the Olympic curriculum at Berlin, and about which Americans have little notion except that it is a German-born game imported to this country by the hyphenates, just as baseball is a U. S.-born game carried abroad by our emigres.

* * *

FRENCH SUSPECTED OUR SANITY

The S. S. Manhattan, U. S. Olympic ark, which docked in Hamburg today carries two complete teams of baseball players, complete with equipment and a professional league umpire. They will play a round of sample games before the German Nazis, though it is doubtful that Herr Hitler can throw out the first ball of the games, even in that sissy, duck wing motion with which our native politicians launch the contest on the day of the grand opening. And I question that Hitler or his horde will remain for more than a few innings, any more than the French peasants stayed to watch our soldiers play "baizbul" in the converted cow pastures behind the lines during the World War.

The peasants would sometimes pause while toting a load of barn fertilizer to the fields and bend puzzled stares toward where our boys slid the bases while the sidelines yelled their larynxes out. But they would always amble off after a moment, intent on their malodorous loads and tapping their skulls significantly with forefingers. The French, like the present Nazis, exalted useful toil and except for propaganda purposes, regard mere games as a foolish pursuit of a frivolous people.

OLD ABNER SOLVES PROBLEM

BEYOND CONSIDERING BASEBALL AN American eccentricity, just as Florida's winter tourists regard jai-alai as a form of Cuban lunacy imported for people seeking goofier ways to gamble, the Germans will say, "Ah very nice, but why do you yell?" Because attempts to transplant national games have seldom been successful, except where two peoples are as sympathetically allied as the Americans and Canadians, who have exchanged hockey and baseball to the mutual gratification of both sides.

I think if baseball were a foreign invention, being newly introduced into this country, as we are newly introducing it to Germany, it would fail to flourish here as it will inevitably be rejected there. Because baseball sprouted up in the United States from little beginnings when our granddaddies were hunting a play outlet other than buggy-riding, lawn bowls and jackknife whittling.

Finally General Abner Doubleday paced off the first crude square in a Cooperstown meadow and invented a game he indulgently called baseball. And presently the nation was playing it for pleasure with clubs springing up in the towns and city centers.

* * *

KNICKERBOCKERS WERE FIRST

THE FIRST BASEBALL CLUB WAS THE Knickerbockers of New York, established in 1842 among the young social bloods of the city and maintained as exclusively as the Corinthian Yacht Club at Marblehead is in the present day. Old Mr. Albert Spaulding, in tracing the history of the game, thought the Knickerbockers a pretty snobbish set who were never able to play the game more than awkwardly themselves, but preferred playing among themselves rather than meeting outside competition with unregistered people in the other clubs which were beginning to spring up in 1846.

The Knickerbockers, it would seem, were in his book were reluctant to accept any challenge from iron mongers, wheelwrights and other grades of "greasy mechanics," because they did not wish the game to fall in the hands of plebeians in the lower social scale. But they found they were unable to keep the game to themselves or retain control over its rules or ethics, because there was very little athletics at that time and young America needed something to quiet their juvenile screams during off days and early evenings. The game was cheap requiring only a few rocks for bases, a hand-wound string ball with knit cover and a lathe-turned bat. The expensive tackle which has made sporting goods houses rise and grow rich, came later as the science of the game grew and the country became more prosperous.

* * *

THE POINT IS THAT BASEBALL answered a National urge in the middle 19th century and expanded by gradual stages into a big business with professional teams sprinkled over the country, which, as a new born game, freshly imported from abroad, it would not do today. The vacant lots are built up now. Movies, radio, the automobile, golf and a dozen accessible diversions have turned the country's kids to other channels, as that an American Legion survey showed recently that boys were playing the game in a descending ratio of 1-to-5 compared with twenty years ago.

It has worried the major leagues and their minor subsidiaries, so that they annually set aside $50,000 for the development and instruction of kid teams through the American Legion and send lecturers with motion picture films touring the schools and junior clubs.

One of these is Leslie Mann, the National League's official missionary, who is now conducting the Olympic pilgrimage to Germany. And although organized baseball has kept pretty mum, it is likely that the $15,000 required to pay the baggage and hotelage of the Olympic ball team abroad is subscribed from the league's treasury, not so much for the sake of carrying the game to the heathen as for a prestige builder and means of stimulating interest among the youth at home. Because what professional baseball dreads more than floods, fire and mutiny, is being starved for lack of upcoming youth of major league standard. Every major league club has the country charted with scouts combing the bushes in their respective territories. And most of the clubs are paying the college expenses of one or several student athletes on the prayerful trust that one day they will be ripe for harvest.

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Parker Favorite Over Hunt In Longwood Semifinal

WESTERN PLAYERS SHINE

By WALTER KILEY

Californians can hardly be blamed for shouting the advantages of the Golden State if their winning performances in the Longwood Bowl competition can be accepted as a true criterion.

Bobby Riggs, the 18-year-old finalist and Joe Hunt, blond, 17-year-old semifinalist, are both from Los Angeles, two of the three remaining in a field of 60 original starters in the men's singles.

And several others from the Golden Gate are scattered through the semi-finals of the doubles, such as Hare y Culley, who pairs with Hunt against Mulloy and Gulbord today. His home is in Santa Barbara.

It is an odd fact, but a true one, that Riggs, sensation of the eastern tennis season, is classed as an outcast by his Southern California Tennis Association, ruling body.

Hunt, his former doubles partner, is the favored one by his home association who sent him on early in order to be ready for the later national singles.

But perhaps before the tennis year is very much older, Southern California may be very glad to take credit for Riggs.

Since leaving the Pacific waters, he has engaged in seven tourneys and gained the finals of all.

He beat Wilmer Rines in straight sets for the Missouri Valley title. He beat Frankis Parker in straight sets for the national clay court title at Chicago. He beat Charlie Harris in the final of the Tri-State championship at Cincinnati.

He beat Gregory Mangin in the Nassau final in straight sets. He lost to Parker in the Spring Lake final. He beat Johnnie Law in the eastern clay court final at New York last Sunday, also in straight sets. And now he has gained the Longwood bowl final with a decisive, smartly attuned attack which left Walter Senior, 27-year-old San Francisco rival, stranded and flat-footed.

GIRL NET RIVALS CLASH

Hunt and Parker are today's semi-final singles opponents. The latter, fifth ranked nationally, is installed choice. But all Hunt needs to pull out the winner is the sure-fire conviction that he can beat Parker, despite the latter's past successful record.

Should Hunt survive, the east will witness a much anticipated match bringing together Hunt and Riggs in the final.

They have met no less than 26 times in west coast competition, with Riggs the winner in a large majority of the matches. But Hunt has improved tremendously this year and already has won two of the four 1936 matches with Riggs.

Weetamoe Leads In Yacht Races

The Chandler Hovey craft took the fourth race in the New York Yacht Club's series of seven as well as the third. Yankee and Rainbow have captured one apiece.

Semi-Pro Tourney Schedule Changed

From every section of the state come late entries into the state championship semi-pro tournament today as brackets were virtually filled for the start of elimination warfare next Monday afternoon at Fenway Park.

Approval of the Torrence Athletic Club of Worcester, as the lone representative from that large city, was accompanied by a change in schedule, as that club was placed on the opening card in opposition to the Cottage Street nine, replacing the Sacred Hearts of Roslindale.

The Sacred Hearts are now slated to play Wednesday afternoon against the Firestone baseball club of New England, one of the new applicants approved yesterday. Other newcomers admitted into the fold at the same time were the Casey Paper nine of Haverhill, Curren's Express of Milford, Norwood Press, and St. Therese baseball club of Everett, all league leaders, defending champs, or top-notch independent teams.

Dorothy Bundy Due To Scale Heights

Miss Bundy, who is today meeting Miss Alice Marble of San Francisco, top-seeded woman favorite, in one of the Longwood Bowl singles semifinals, is, perhaps, the only daughter playing the game seriously today—or for that matter son who can boast not one, but two, parents who are former national champions.

Few oldtimers in the court game will forget May Sutton Bundy, who, born in England, moved to Frisco and then went on to lift the United States national championship in 1904 and the British amateur title the year following.

Nor will they pass up lightly the super performances of old Tom Bundy, one of the game's greatest court tacticians of all time, who, paired with the great Maurice McLaughlin, captured not one but three national doubles championships, 1912, 13 and '14.

But Dorothy's background of tennis prestige doesn't stop there [illegible]

For if mamma serves correct, didn't her first cousin, Johnny Doeg, win the national singles championship not so long ago?

The present trip to the Longwood Bowl tourney is only one of several eastern journeys made by Dot, who just passed out of the [illegible] classification.

She was here some six or seven years ago when her mother attempted a comeback.

Perhaps she will never attain the distinction of her famous parents. But at [illegible] she is well [illegible] and has as her goal, duplication of their achievements.

She is well set up, a bit chunky and pretty. She proved her stamina when she outlasted Mrs. Bernard M. Johnson (Virginia Rice) Massachusetts champion, in a 4-6, 6-3, 6-0 quarter-final victory.

Miss Bundy hits the ball crisply off her forehand. And George Carens, the tennis expert, will tell you that she is better off the forehand than Doeg, her cousin.

BEES SEND MacFAYDEN AFTER 10TH WIN

Mr. Boston Boosts Honest Riders

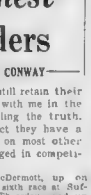
By JACK CONWAY

JOCKEYS still retain their high ranking with me in the matter of telling the truth. In this respect they have a decided edge on most other athletes engaged in competitive sport.

Jockey L. McDermott, up on Eastport in the sixth race at Suffolk Downs on Thursday, owed up to the jockey code for telling the truth when called to the stand following a claim of foul by Jockey R. Howell who had been up on Mary Elise.



Mr. Boston

As the horses rounded the last turn coming into the head of the stretch, Mary Elise was jammed against the rail.

"McDermott and Smith were responsible for sending me against the rail," said Howell. "McDermott was nearest to me, Smith on the outside."

Smith was the jockey on Baron Lynn which finished second to Drowsy with Eastport third as the horses passed the finish line.

"Smith wasn't at fault," McDermott told the stewards. "I jammed into Howell and he went against the rail, It was all my fault."

McDermott's mount, Eastport was naturally disqualified, and third place given to Mary Elise which had crossed the finish line fifth.

Racing Code

JUDGE Frank Bryan, one of the country's most famous officials told me when at Suffolk Downs last Summer that it was more important for a jockey to be truthful than for him to be a good jockey.

"There is a place on the race track for the fair jockey," said the judge who rules with an iron hand, "but there is not any spot for a boy who doesn't tell the truth."

I wish some of the owners and trainers were as truthful and as courageous as the able human rules who handle their horses in the thick of hotly contested races.

Time Supply

TIME Supply will remain at Suffolk Downs, and will be a starter in other stake races before the summer meeting ends. Time Supply is in excellent physical condition. He is a big strong horse and can stand a great deal of work.

Time Supply could have done a great deal better than to be the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap if he had been necessary to do so. Jockey Sonny Workman is one of the most powerful jockeys in the country, and he would have got as much speed out of Time Supply if the latter had received any serious challenge in the stretch run.

Max's Wishes

MAX Schmeling will be rooting for Jack Sharkey when the latter starts trading punches against Joe Louis in the ring bowl at the Yankee Stadium, New York on August 18.

"I always liked Sharkey even though we met in the ring twice," the German heavyweight told me following his knockout of Louis. "Before I knew Sharkey, I was told he talked a great deal, but when I got to know him I found such was not the case.

"Naturally Sharkey has confidence in his own ability to win, but I also believed in myself when I entered the ring against Louis. I would like to see Sharkey successful in his comeback until such time as he may meet me. Then I hope he loses. That is fair, isn't it?

"In our first bout, Sharkey gave me a great deal of punishment. That is one of the reasons I felt I could take Louis' best blows and then come on to win. I did better in my second bout with Sharkey."

Even if Louis should win over Sharkey, he won't get another crack at Schmeling.

"I shall never fight Louis again," said Schmeling. "I have beaten him once and that is enough. If I win the championship from Jimmy Braddock, I shall never accept Louis as a challenger."

There may be another reason why Schmeling would like to see Sharkey dispose of Louis for all time as a heavyweight challenger.

HURLS In Red FINALE

BUSH TO WORK ON SUNDAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Daniel Knowles MacFayden, the old Somerville High hurler, won his eighth game of the season for the Bees when he turned back the Cincinnati Reds early in June.

It looked then as though the bespectacled "Deacon" was headed for his greatest campaign. Immediately thereafter, though, he fell upon lean days, and eight times he failed in his efforts to gain victory No. 9 before he finally succeeded against the aforementioned Redlegs in Cincinnati's 105 heat two weeks ago today.

Danny lost some ten pounds on that occasion and went into another tailspin. Twice since he's tried to chalk up his tenth triumph (a no ava)

But he sees the world through rose colored glasses today. Already he figures himself among the select class of hurlers whose win total now runs to double figures. For he's been given the assignment of facing the Reds again in the final game of the current series at the Hive this p. m. and his opponent before the Ladies' Day crowd will be none other than Gene Schott, victim of that long-delayed ninth decision.

Shows Promise

If Dan can earn his tenth victory today he'll still have a fighting chance of making 1936 his best season. His creditable performance in the past was as a Red Sox in 1932 when he won 18 and lost 12 for the only winning average of his career.

The Somerville boy showed plenty of promise for two years previous to his banner season, winning 10 games in 1929 and turning in 11 victories in 1930. After leaving the Sox in '32, however, he proved a flop with the Yanks and Reds and appeared through as a big leaguer until he was rescued from the ash heap a year ago by Bill McKechnie and revitalized by the canny Scot's magic.

Wilkinsburg Will, Incidentally will take on another so-called has been as a patient today in the person of Guy "Joe" Bush, the swarthy Mississippian who was recently labeled "done" and cut loose by the Pirates.

Only two years back this long lean right-hander was winning 5 games for the Cubs and money couldn't buy him.

"I'll have him ready to hand me a victory over the Cardinals on Sunday," predicts the keeper of the Bees.

You wouldn't doubt that if you saw what the most amazing of Ross Bill's "comeback kids" did to the Reds in the Thursday tilt.

We refer to Bobby Smith the Atlanta thrush, who, like MacFayden once had the can tied to him in Cincy and was welcomed with open arms by Mr. McKechnie.

The remarkable Robert is paid to be a Bees' coach but occasionally he grows tired of seeing the boys loaf and steps out to show them how to win.

He took his 28-year-old pitching wing to the hill in the third game of the series and broke our heroes' four game losing streak by the safest method known to baseball. He decorated the visitors with nine assorted round horse-collars, as he prevailed 4-0.

It was his fifth win of the season as against one defeat and his second shutout.

In his previous start last Friday he set down the champion Cubs, 5 to 1, for the Bees first and only win of the season in Chicago. Shortly before that he had set nine Reds down in order during a three-inning relief performance in Cincinnati.

In other words, the stout-hearted veteran whom every big league manager but McKechnie regarded as all washed up three years ago, has now allowed but one run in 21 innings and has turned in 12 scoreless frames against the Reds.

Bobby was given a one run lead when Tony Cuccinello hit a home run off Ray Peacha in the second inning. He didn't have a chance to breathe freely, however, until Joe Cascarella belted a four-bagger off Lew Stone in the seventh to put the Bees three runs ahead.

O'Connor Named Worcester Coach

Worcester, July 24—John W. O'Connor, former Malden High and Holy Cross athletic star has been appointed teacher coach at St. John's High School here.

Red Sox Tackle Tigers In Detroit Series

Detroit, Mich., July 24—Boston's battered but still battling Red Sox arrived here in town this morning to open a three game series.

The Boston club minus the services of Manager Joe Cronin, who divide honors with the Tigers, who are also without the guidance of Manager Mickey Cochrane, who is still confined at a nearby hospital. Acting Managers Al Schacht and Herb Pennock, representing Cronin, will send Johnny Marcum to the hill, while Del Baker, who casts the ballot in place of Cochrane, will counter with Vic Sorrell, the ancient, near-sighted right hander, who is still troublesome.

The series means much to the Sox for if they can sweep the three games, they stand an excellent chance of leaving the second division and even getting back into third place.

As the situation now stands the Tigers are now in fifth place a half game behind the White Sox and only a full game behind the third place Tigers.

Because of this the Red Sox will be shooting for victory today in order to get the edge on the series. The one chance that was made in yesterday's group subtracting Mr. Ananda for Davis Cooke will probably stand again today.

Even though Mel did not get a hit, the Sox finally broke the Cleveland jinx and won, 9 to 8. Because of this, the co-managers will not break up their winning combination.

Net Injury May Bench Allison

New York, July 24 (U.S.)—Wilmer Allison, national singles champion, may be through with tennis for good, he declared on his arrival here from England.

Bothered by a hip injury he sustained during the Davis cup matches with Australia, the Texas veteran was in Washington today where he will undergo an examination that will determine his tennis future.

"If the doctor says it's all right, I'll play at Seabright next week," he stated.

"If I come through without much pain I'll get ready for the national championships at Forest Hills in September. Otherwise, I'll hang up my racquet for good."

Watch Winners Given Prizes at Hive

The club's boosted power is to make the presentation of prizes to the winners of the recent Boston Evening American Sandlot Baseball Watch Company A Score contest.

The scene will be on the playing field at Braves Field in Park just before the game between the Bees and the Cincinnati Reds.

The medals are to be the 29 men and five women who were best of a total of 2,500 persons who took part in naming the players and batting orders of the All-Star game in Boston.

The names are to be 17 years five men and women whose Curves were judged most nearly perfect.

Those who are entitled to the medals and who are advised to be on hand at the ceremony to make a personal appearance will receive their prizes through registered mail in the very near future.

Many of the winners have written a thanking the directors of the contest for giving them the opportunity of making such grand

Tuesday the 11th of all and by the judges of the Boston Evening American Sandlot Baseball Watch Company A Score contest.

Mr. Quinn is now in an embarrassing position. She writes:

"I wish to thank the Boston Evening American judges for selecting me as one of the winners of the All-Star contest.

"I signed my name from my nick-name (Lou) but my real name is Louella, thereby being a lady.

"Naturally, I would like a lady's wrist watch but if it is impossible (and I don't blame the judges for taking me to be a man from the name I used then I'm sure my husband will be more than delighted to receive one of the fine Gruen Curvex watches."

Well, we'll have to do something about this matter.

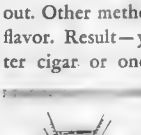
Half smoked Why?

You see them everywhere—these half smoked cigars. Snuffed out on ash trays . . thrown away on the street. The reason? Bitter, bitey, raspy taste. None of that mildness with good, honest tobacco flavor you smokers want in a cigar.

WHY THESE BITTER, BITEY CIGARS?

The answer is this. All cigar tobaccos contain certain harsh, bitter elements. If not taken out, they cause bitey bitterness and raspy taste in a cigar.

Ordinary curing methods can't take them out. Other methods destroy the true tobacco flavor. Result—you either get a harsh, bitter cigar or one that is flat and insipid.



BAYUK'S EXCLUSIVE PROCESS

This picture shows an important unit in the exclusive Bayuk Process for extracting the bitter oils and other harsh elements from the fine tobaccos used in PHILLIES. This process enables you to enjoy the full flavor of fine tobacco without any bitter, bitey, harsh taste. Bayuk invites you to visit the factory and see this process in operation.

HOW BAYUK SOLVED THE PROBLEM

Bayuk invented a process that does things to cigar tobaccos never accomplished before. It not only removes the harshness and bitterness, but actually improves the tobacco flavor.

This process—covered by patent protection—enables Bayuk to give you a cigar like PHILLIES—mild, smooth, mellow from end to end. You enjoy—to the full limit—the rich, satisfying flavor of its fine Longfiller Havana and Domestic tobaccos.

ROMNEY ROYAL WILSON'S BEST

STARTS In Downs SPRINT

CALAVERAS IN FIRST

By DAVE WILSON

(Selections For Fast Track)

BEST BET—ROMNEY ROYAL—SECOND

Suffolk Downs, July 24—Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Romney Royal, a sterling second to Prairie Prince in last start, stands out all over the other entrants in the second race here today, a 5½-furlong test for juveniles.

He is my choice as the safest wagering proposition of the card.

FIRST RACE

Calaveras, B. Eighty, Col. Bixer

CALAVERAS, pitted in ambitiously in $4000 company last trip, needs only to put forth a best effort to lead this group of $2,000 platers. Clockers report the Oaktree stable's colorbearer on razor edge. B. EIGHTY, on general Detroit form, shapes up as the main danger. COL. BIXER flashed excellent form in drubbing shifty $1,500 company only a short time back.

SECOND RACE

Romney Royal, Moon Harvest, Amhurst

ROMNEY ROYAL, second to Prairie Prince, turned in a highly creditable performance considering he was not partial to the slow footing. Off that effort, I find it impossible to go past the Stewart colorbearer in searching for the winner of this race. Contention may be furnished by MOON HARVEST which displayed speed in finishing third to Swift Lad and AMHURST a few days back. With expected improvement he should easily reverse the table on AMHURST.

THIRD RACE

Guardian, Bye Bye Mary, Moralist

Will-yum Ames may need a guardian if his GUARDIAN fails to win this race. The Ames breadwinner appeared to be a victim of stupid handling when he finished third to Nocturnlabe and Last Romance in his most recent essay. The gray horse figures to easily outlast BYE BYE MARY for top honors. MORALIST, on class alone for the remainder.

FOURTH RACE

Pegotty Ann, Makalaw, Paris Model

Going to give PEGOTTY ANN one more chance. The Spreckels colorbearer was installed a red hot favorite in better company last trip, but performed as if a trifle shy on racing condition. MAKALAW figures to offer the contention. PARIS MODEL finished far back last time, but Detroit form suggests she may be capable of better things.

FIFTH RACE

Gallant Prince, Good Flavor, Faust

GALLANT PRINCE stepped one mile in 1:37 2 to drub opposition of the same calibre in his last race. GOOD FLAVOR, third to the top one, was beaten only a head and neck for major honors in the above mentioned race and is favored by a three pound shift in weights. FAUST placed too ambitiously in recent races, is back among home folks. May come up the good thing.

SIXTH RACE

All Forlorn, Westy Junior, Red Wagon

Stringing along with ALL FORLORN in this wide open race. This mare displayed marked improvement in finishing third to Great Haste and Rough Party only a few days since. WESTY JUNIOR, winner of four out of five starts, including a $5000 added handicap at Detroit, will give the top one plenty of competition. RED WAGON should not be thrown in with a wash.

SEVENTH RACE

Mountainy Man, Lady Flinders, Even Up

MOUNTAINY MAN, second to Sand Baby, needs only to duplicate that effort in present race to ... brackets here. LADY FLINDERS last effort was much too poor to ... EVEN UP could ... of ... and after a slow beginning last trip. With a more alert start he may prove troublesome in the late stages of the race.

EIGHTH RACE

Office Boy, Light-heeled, Marcleave

Have a hunch that Trainer George Arvin will send OFFICE BOY after the checks in this affair. The Kearns colorbearer was pitted too highly in his last couple of outings. LIGHTHEELED, on general form, shapes up as the main danger. MARCLEAVE figures next best on the strength of recent third to Bunny Martin.

JACOBS Flirts With GARDEN

MAX TO TRAIN AT SPECULATOR

New York, July 24 (AP)—The little birds are saying Mike Jacobs is flirting with the Madison Square Garden directorate again.

The big reason for the sad plight of the skidding Yankees is the terrific batting slump of El Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio.

After the halfway mark was reached July 5, DiMaggio dropped down to a .350 clip before rallying in the last few games.

Max Schmeling is going back to Speculator, N. Y., to train for the Jimmy Braddock bout—if it is ever made.

This gem came over the air during a broadcast of a game in a Western city: "Gehrig lifts a high foul into the stands . . . A fan is standing up to catch it . . . Oh, oh! . . . He's pulling his thumb back into place."

Grammy Foursome

The Elmwood Country Club of Marshalltown, Ia., has a "grandmothers' foursome" composed of Mrs. Emma Pursel, Mrs. A. R. Cooper, Mrs. H. A. Kinnan and Mrs. George M. Davis.

The girls can—and do—shoot a snappy nine holes in the low 50s . . . Ray (Peaches) Davis, new Cincinnati pitcher, looks like Walter Johnson, but only in the face . . . Lou Finney, first sacker and outfielder, is the sole survivor of Connie Mack's last pennant-winning Athletic team.

Little did Colonel D. Walker Wear of the State Boxing Commission realize he was making history when he stopped at the Hotel Astor bar for an eye-opener the other a. m.

The colonel had no sooner ordered a shot of his favorite bourbon than up dashed Manager Robert K. Christenberry to present him with an illuminated scroll for being the millionth patron of the hotel's new bar. P. S.: The colonel also got a drink on the house . . . Those are football coaches you hear moaning. . . . Said one Eastern mentor: "My first team is o. k., but my second team couldn't make a first down against a strong wind" . . . Jesse Owens is going in for politics when he gets back from the Olympics.

COLLYER'S SPORT OF KINGS COMMENT

By BERT E. COLLYER

CASE ACE! Boy, I could be arrested for what's in my mind.

As a matter of fact, Trainer McGarvey believes this the best two-year old in the country and he goes in the third canto at Arlington. Let your conscience be your guide. In the fourth, JEWELL DORSETT, which finished second to APOGEE in the big stake, is also well placed, while ONWENTSIA is again carrying the commitments of the "smart set." Yowsah bow' sin 'save the old 'ank.

Down at Empire City, where some pretty nifty sport has been the rule rather than the exception, I have the happy chatter "tell the gang to take the MARSHALL FIELD ENTRY—in the fourth, for the limit; they are pounds the best." Well, whatcha waitin' on?

Rushaway, Gallant Gay To Meet in 'Cap

By BOB [redacted]

Rushaway and Gallant Gay will resume their turf rivalry in the Myles Standish Handicap, the $2500 added feature carded for tomorrow at Suffolk Downs. The mile and a furlong test is expected to attract a field of ten probable starters.

Rushaway, A. G. Tarn's iron horse, has been allotted top impost of 126 pounds in the Myles Standish by Racing Secretary Ben Holmes with Weston Adam's Gallant Gay next with 123. Then comes Wheatley Stable's Seabiscuit, 115 pounds.

Rushaway will be picking up five more pounds than he carried in the $15,000 added Yankee Stakes at the East Boston track. In that event, the Tarn colorbearer ran second to Memory Brook. The Galatian colt, Gallant Gay will do likewise, taking on five pounds more than his last trip to the gate, which was the Yankee Stakes. Gallant Gay was third to Memory Brook and Rushaway that day.

Two probable starters in the Myles Standish, Admiral C. T. Grayson's Brown Top and Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Knight Warrior were withdrawn from the Massachusetts Handicap to be primed for their engagements in the Myles Standish.

Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's Time Supply, winner of the $25,000 added Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs will be kept at the local oval until the opening of Narragansett's summer meeting, August 15.

The son of Time Maker will then be shipped to Gansett where he will be prepped for his engagement in the rich Narragansett Special. It was in the inaugural running of the Narragansett feature that Time Supply raced to victory.

Discovery and Good Gamble, A. G. Vanderbilt's handicap hopes have been vanned to Saratoga from the East Boston track . . . Moralist, Hi-Vic and Silvery Way have arrived from New York and have been added to the William H. Gallagher string now quartered here . . . Johnny Longden is leading the Suffolk jockey colony in the battle for the $500 watch that Managing Director Allan J. Wilson is offering to the leading rider of the last half of the current session . . .

Paques, Savings and Lady Milly have been added to starter Jim Milton's schooling list . . . Average purse allotment at Suffolk Downs totals $9500 . . . Harry Richards, one of the outstanding riders in the land will leave Suffolk Downs for Empire City today so as to be in Gotham to have the mount aboard John H. Whitney's Singing Wood in the stake at Empire tomorrow . . .

Sammy Coule, the lad who used to sell copies of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser around Castle square a year ago is now a member of the Suffolk jockey colony, youthful Coule accepted his first mount before the home folks yesterday. He is under contract to Belmont Evans.

R. N. Blackburn, Jr., has taken over the string of Cleveland Putnam to train. Putnam's former trainer, Johnny Parmalee has left for California to purchase a breeding farm for his employer. Putnam's Ladysman will be retired to head the stud of Putnam's new ranch. In Blackburn, the sportsman has one of the better young trainers in these parts.

Carl Hanford, oldest of the Hanford brothers now riding, is at Empire City. Carl has joined the string of Val Crane and will ride the horses of the popular sportsman in their engagements at that point. Today is Nantasket Beach Day at Suffolk Downs with the featured event being labeled the Paragon Park Special.

Double Payoff On Suffolk Race

Reports from New Orleans today indicated that the second race at the Downs Wednesday was not only a severe headache to the form players here but also to the bookies 'way down South.

In that race Tintoretto was the winner and paid off in the mutuels at a little better than 6 to 1.

Ticket holders were paid $14, $6.60 and $4.40 for across-the-board bets.

Twenty-four hours later the service informed its clients that Tintoretto was the real victor in the race. All bettors who were able to find their tickets on Tintoretto were paid off.

Outboard Races Attract Colonel's Friends

By DAVE EGAN

Now plans are being made for the congress of the chuckle-heads, which will be held in the Charles River Basin a week from Saturday and Sunday, when some 250 gentlemen with outboard motors will put-put-put all over the river.

Dave Egan

It is entitled Boston's Motor Boat Regatta, and is under the direction of the Central New England Regatta Association and under the auspices of this paper.

Mr. Jack Conway, the sports editor, insinuated that it might be well for me to acquaint the public with the facts of this matter.

"There is a dash of the crackpot in you," he said in a kindly manner, "and I am informed that you have a large following among the crack-pots, nit-wits and numbskulls of New England. You were crack-potted, nit-witted, and numb-skulled enough to pick Max Schmeling and Time Supply, so now marshal all your talents and announce the Motor Boat Regatta."

"What will I write about?" I asked, with a quick gleam of intelligence.

A. A. U. Taboo

"About a column," he said, "and please do not drag in the A. A. U., the Olympic Committee, the beano operators, or Dr. Frank Townsend. A simple, straightforward narrative concerning the approaching regatta, couched in simple, readable English, is all we ask."

It happens that I am quite an expert on the matter. For years my little set thought that water was something which flowed under bridges and also floated boats, until a kindly old doctor, a tout at heart, touted us into drinking some.

Then I became interested in all manner of aquatic sports, including yacht races. At the international races in Newport a year ago, it was your jolly old sea-dog who called on his nautical knowledge and zipped off the roaring ballad, "Will You Luff Me In September As You Did In May?"

Previously, I had a very sad experience concerning outboard motors. Several years ago, I covered the Harvard-Yale regatta for a paper which has strong Harvard leanings. When Harvard was beaten by 16 lengths, I offered the suggestion that their crew should be equipped with outboard motors in the future, which was a very smart crack at the time, for the outboard motors were gadgets which only daffy-dills would fool with.

Now, though it is a hum-dinger of a sport. Last year's regatta in the Charles Basin attracted 201 entrants and a crowd conservatively estimated at 75,000 lined the Boston bank, the Cambridge bank, and both the Harvard Bridge, where the races start, and the Longfellow Bridge, where they finish.

They say it was the dangdest thing you or your elderly maiden aunt ever witnessed. An outboard motor boat looks like a bed-room slipper without a heel and is just about as large. Attached to the stern (up the dock, sailor!) is a motor which makes a great racket and propels the boat forward at terrific speed.

The chuckle-heads who drive these boats came to Boston last year from every state in the Union and from British Columbia, and the meet held here was the largest ever held anywhere at any time.

This year's meet will be even larger, with 250 entries, both amateur and professional. It came as a surprise to me to learn that there are professional out-board motorers, if that is the expression, and that they make a very comfortable living, moving into spots like Lake George and the Charles Basin and Lake Quinsigamond, yanking a string that is attached to the motor, and then whirling over the water while sitting on practically nothing.

The leading professional is Fred Jacoby of New Jersey, but New England has two of them—Clayton Bishop of Onset, a fireman who recently won the race from Albany to New York, and Marshall Eldredge of Weymouth, an old-timer who still wins his share of the purses.

NIGGER HAFT CONTENDER

By SAM COHEN

BEST BET—JEW BUG

Bull Hefner is due back in the winner's brackets and should turn the trick in the eighth race feature although Big Laddie and Nigger Haft will be on hand to offer the opposition.

7	Miss Lynn	48	I. Thompson	10-1

MUSIC MAD [illegible] second [illegible] company Wednesday, might be the right one here. Pup showed [illegible] previous victory and form indicates that she can go the distance. DON J.'s [illegible] in-the-money record [illegible] give him a chance. COCO BUCK [illegible] up with the leaders in the [illegible]

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY
BEN ROLL, RINGING BREEZE, FIDDLE STICKS

2	Pepper Mark	66	R. F. Randle	8-1
7	Stoney's Favorite	71	T. W. Randall	10-1

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY
OFFICER LIGHTNING, GREYTICK, MATCHLESS OFFICER

3	Officer Light'g	63	Dan Oswald	5-1
8	Greytick	68	Art Wilson	5-1
2	Matchless Off'r	63	Wm. Baker	5-1

5	Our Lassie	60	F. C. Lawman	7-1
4	Pepper Roll	62	Glenwood Ken.	10-1
6	Skemalong	66	Jess Bingham	10-1

OFFICER LIGHTNING running in much improved form recent starts, appears about due for a winning effort. Dog has finished well up last two. GREYTICK, a victor against cheaper company, showed a willingness to run on that occasion and might surprise, although in much better company tonight. MATCHLESS OFFICER has disappointed many times, but deserves another chance.

SEVENTH RACE
LIKE LADDIE, JIMMY FOX, BETTY IOTA

6	Like Laddie	68	Jess Bingham	5-1
8	Jimmy Fox	62	J. D. [illegible]	5-1
4	Betty Iota	52	Chas. Holmes	5-1

2	Andreosa	53	F. Doyle	9-1
3	Truly Sad	54	Freda Koontz	10-1

EIGHTH RACE—5-16 MILE
BULL HEFNER, BIG LADDIE, NIGGER HAFT

2	Bull Hefner	67	Glenwood Ken.	4-1
7	Big Laddie	73	Frank Jones	5-1
5	Nigger Haft	73	John Peack	6-1
3	Frank Lonergan	76	Jess Bingham	7-1

6	Tempest	68	R. B. Carroll	7-1
1	Glenfield	63	D. Callaghan	8-1
8	Mattie	59	John Allen	10-1

BULL HEFNER, back in top form after tightener on Wednesday, might be the right one here but he has a crack field to beat. BIG LADDIE, the big, fast-closing Frank Jones dog, likely to be up arguing late in the race while NIGGER HAFT is abreast on best form. GLENFIELD, right up with the best of them lately, is another strong contender.

NINTH RACE—FUTURITY
CAPTAIN SALT, BROWN SUGAR, NEBRASKA CASH

2	Captain Salt	69	J. D. Hall	4-1
8	Brown Sugar	61	Sid Manor	4-1
7	Nebraska Cash	65	John Peack	6-1
4	Big Friend	72	F. W. Jones	7-1
5	Miss Trat Court	53	Dan Oswald	8-1
8	Englewood	61	J. W. Randall	8-1
1	Speedy Event	65	Gus Maies	10-1
3	Lady Blendell	66	Art Wilson	10-1

CAPTAIN SALT, winner of his last effort from the two hole, is again in that box and therefore looms up as the one to beat. BROWN SUGAR, a perennial fader in the closing yards, looks second best. Dog will win eventually; tonight may be the time. NEBRASKA CASH, accustomed to faster company, should go well here. Others have run some fine races.

TENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
MY FASHION, EFFIE M., TAILSPIN BREEZE

2	My Fashion	63	F. W. Jones	4-1
3	Effie M.	56	R. F. Randle	6-1
1	Tailspin Breeze	65	Geo. Lippold	5-1
6	Mutton Roll	58	J. A. Austin	6-1
8	Roughneck Pete	74	John Peack	7-1
4	Chif's Darling	50	Mrs. M. Failing	8-1
5	Public Enemy	72	Art Wilson	9-1
7	Speedy Lad	68	Jess Bingham	10-1

MY FASHION, winner by eight lengths previous out, should repeat here, but probably won't. Dog has shown consistent inconsistency, but rates as the main threat on best form. EFFIE M. is classy but hasn't shown much lately. TAILSPIN BREEZE for the remainder. Others dull recently.

Success and Failure

Fillies Have Chance In Illinois Classic

By BILL CORUM

Chicago, July 24—I wouldn't know this personally, of course, but they tell me that gals are always dangerous when it's vacation time.

Somehow the combination of lazy yellow harvest moons, shaky canoes on still waters, and young men with no business on their minds save monkey-business, seems to give them a set-up that is ideal for their devious designs.

This doesn't happen to be one of my problems since I take my vacations in the safe and sane winter-time. But what set me to thinking about it was the fact that three young and dashing fillies are listed among the ten possible starters in tomorrow's $35,000 Arlington classic over what, to my mind, is the best run race track in America.

The wise men of the turf tell us never to trust a filly in the spring, and from sad experience with the likes of that deceitful strawberry blonde, Nellie Flag, and that peroxide charmer Mata Hari, I have learned that the wise men of the turf are right.

However, the spring of 1936 is gone with so many other springs and the three ladies of the mid-west's great mid-summer derby may prove to be three queens. And the wise men of the turf and the poker table also know that three queens are hard to beat.

We go back to the days of the Floradora Sextette, big hats with flower gardens on 'em, the Merry Widow waltz and Gaby Deslys and Harry Pilcer for the name of our first classic charmer. She is Floradora herself, a sweet and gentle debutante whose mother was Gentle Play and she hails from the farm of E. Dale Shaffer [illegible] the pike in Oak Kentucky.

Floradora is not a big [illegible] she has that certain something [illegible] and in the Blackstone Purse [illegible] ago, she simply breezed away [illegible] several of her most [illegible] male rivals in the classic [illegible] she just laughed home through the mud and seemed to enjoy [illegible] Count Morse, Mr. Bones, H[illegible] Isolator and others a merry [illegible] Girls are like that I guess.

"It's not that I don't like the boys," said Flora, when she was interviewed in her comfortable boudoir-stall here last evening. "They're really very nice. Count Morse is so handsome and distinguished looking and Mr. Bones is the best dancer in our set. But I do love to tease them and play the field, as mother says I am not old enough to start keeping steady company with one boy."

Perhaps this explains why [illegible] dora is so carefully pro[illegible] she is almost as isolated and [illegible] here at Arlington Heights [illegible] Garbo is in Hollywood. H[illegible] er, the canny Scot Alex [illegible] has consistently refused [illegible] her during the regular [illegible] workout hours. He also [illegible] practically all visitors [illegible] photographers, from h[illegible]

Floradora's training [illegible] have been held by what the [illegible] call lantern light [illegible] hours, and practically all [illegible] body knows about h[illegible] ing race she ran over [illegible] track of last Saturday.

As a rule the sons and [illegible] of the stallion Bulldog [illegible] gifted with mud running [illegible] But Floradora either is the exception that proves the rule, or she so far outclassed her rivals in the Blackstone that the muddy going couldn't stop her.

True, she carried only 1[illegible] pounds in that race, whereas she must pick up 113 in the classic. And [illegible] you can't wholly overlook her [illegible] pretty much the same [illegible] she beat so soundly.

Trainer Gordon [illegible] of confidence and [illegible] when Granville, Mr. Bones, Count Morse, Hollyrood and the others are mentioned, as though he might be keeping his Scotch tongue in his cheek.

The veteran Nick Wall will be in the stirrups and when fat purses are hanging on the wire, Nick manages to find the shortest way home.

GAR WOOD, JR., ENTERS OUTBOARD REGATTA

WABAN Youth Is RIVAL

NATION'S BEST TO COMPETE

By CAPTAIN CUTWATER

Once again the entry list of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser outboard motor boat regatta looks like the Who's Who of speed boat racing.

As the entries pour in to Commodore Stanley W. Ferguson, it becomes certain that the two days of racing on the Charles River Basin on August 1 and 2 will bring America's best speed boat pilots to Boston.

Heading the list already promised is Gar Wood, Jr., skillful racing son of the famous Detroit, the Gar Wood whose Miss America holds the world's speed record

Young Wood, who is rapidly becoming as clever a pilot as his father, cleaned up in the Maryland regattas. He comes to Boston again this year determined to end the reign of another schoolboy race driver, Clint Ferguson of Waban, who last year stole Wood's thunder in the first American-Advertiser regatta.

Sharp Battle

The two young dare-devils battled nip and tuck last year in half a dozen events, Ferguson getting the edge when Wood's boat smashed into a wave while leading on the last lap of the Class C speedboat race, and the Michigan boy joined the "Hell Divers" Club by a swift plunge into the drink

Others planning to join the Boston fleet a week from tomorrow include Fred Jacoby, Jr., of North Bergen, N. J.; Fred Cardin of East Islip, N. Y., and Joel Thorne of Atlantic City. All were among the chief point winners a year ago.

Thorne, who drives in the amateur division, has turned most of his efforts this summer to his new boat in the 225-cubic inch runabout class. His Blue Prelude simply ran away from the others on the Basin a year ago, but the class has got much tougher this year.

Jacoby ranks as one of the most dangerous record breakers in the game. Three times in a row he shattered the Class B mark last August, and with calm water he is out to ruin his own competition records again this year

Setting a fast pace, Calumet Dilworthy easily won the first two heats in 2.04, at the finish of the latter the favorite, Calumet Ejay driven by Dr. Hugh Parmelee of Urbana, set the pace and when Calumet Dilworthy broke through just when he looked like the winner went on to win in 2.0[illegible]

The previous record for three heats in a race was made by Billy McKinney in 2.06¼, 2.04 and 2.04¼, over the Middletown, N. Y. track in 2.06¾, 2.04 and 2.04¼. The new champion [illegible] M. W. [illegible] Nix of Sparta, N. Y.

New England's Best Junior Golfers Ready to Compete in Hearst Tourney

AUGUST 3 DATE OF START

A trickle of entries that started with the announcement of the William Randolph Hearst annual New England Junior golf championship, became a torrent this morning.

The mailman had a very difficult time indeed, as he toted a large bundle of entries into the Evening American sports department.

Although there's been no chance yet to catalogue the names completely, the caliber of those already in the fold indicates that the greatest field ever assembled for a junior golf championship will swing into action at four clubs [illegible] next month

Qualifying rounds at four clubs, located so as to make it possible for every boy in New England who has not reached his 18th birthday to compete in the Hearst tourney, open on August 3 at the Wachusett Country Club, for boys in Vermont and the western area of Massachusetts.

Next qualifying test comes August 10 at Blue Hill Country Club in Canton, for the greater Boston juniors. On August 13 at the Merrimack Valley Country Club in Methuen, boys from Maine, New Hampshire and the area northeast of Boston will compete.

The final tryout comes on August 17 at the Metacomet Golf Club in East Providence, when boys from Rhode Island, Connecticut and the southeastern area of Massachusetts get into action.

There will be 16 qualifiers from each of the four clubs, and these 64 juniors, survivors of medal play, will go into match play for the Hearst New England title at Sandy Burr

Last year Tom Cummings, popular Dedham golfer after making a spectacular rescue on the Charles river, rushed to the club house through the tournament for a few days under [illegible] for first prize

Casey's, Wolf's Reach Park Semifinals

With Wolf's and Dick Casey's club safely in the semi-final round of the Boston Park League, the interest at hand is focused on the Jordans-Maddens game tonight at Marcella street, Roxbury, and the clash at the Fens stadium between Roslindale Town club and Kennedy's.

Wolf's took three straight from the Hennigans of Roxbury by scores of 9-6, 17-3 and 10-3. Jim Shea, Fred Lettua and Tom Quigley were the winning hurlers, while Bill Marshall was the batting star of the clothiers.

Dick Casey's club of Neponset also took three in succession from St. Lazarus by counts of 4-1, 17-2 and 10-5. O Hara, Davis and Somy did the chucking for the Dorchester solon. These two winners are drawn in the same division and will be opponents in the semi-finals starting next week

Jordans and Roslindale Town club hold a 2-1 advantage over their opponents the Maddens and Kennedys. Jordans won the initial game at Dorchester 7-2 and the Roxbury boys came back at their own grounds to win 9-8. In the third game last night the Jordans, Charley Burd had too much on the ball and the retailers won by 2-0.

A Roslindale town club is playing its best ball of the year right now and is confident of reaching the finals. They won easily in the first game against Kennedy's at Healy field, 11-2 and then came back last night, after losing the second, 10-3, to take the storemen, 7-1.

Kennedy's has its back to the wall tonight and the largest crowd of the season is due at the Fens grounds to see the clubs go into battle

Net Rivals

As an added feature of Governor's Day at Sandy Burr on August 18, James Roosevelt, son of the President, is to meet Governor Green of Rhode Island in an exhibition tennis match.

ATHLETES Criticize New BERLIN TRACK

Berlin, July 24—After working out today for the first time on the Olympic track, German athletes declared the track is too hard and brittle

Work on the rebuilt track has just been completed but the real quality of the cinder path on which the track and field stars of the world will struggle for Olympic glory is yet to be established.

Officials said the track was satisfactory, but it still lacks the final touch to condition it for new record making

It is said to have long waves noticeable only to the runners although hardly perceptible to the spectators eyes

Pierson Medalist In Conn. Golf

Eastern Point, Ct., July 24—Andrew Pierson of Cromwell, Ct., turned in a sub-par 71 to take the medal honors in the qualifying round of the Shennecossett men's invitation tournament

Regarded as a dark horse, he led a field of 85, including the Earl of Lincoln, a visitor here, whose score of 85 missed the championship flight by one stroke

Pierson was within reach of the tournament qualifying record score of 70 held by Billy Lamme of Columbus, Ohio, in 1929, but he two-putted nine times from distances ranging from five to ten feet

Aleck Gerard, Jr., of Southampton, N. Y., Eastern interscholastic champion, took second place with a 73. Bobby Grant of Wethersfield Conn., tournament winner and medalist last year, posted a 74 to tie for third place with William Danks of Norwich, Conn.

Max Marston of Philadelphia, six times winner of the tournament who is regarded as the chief menace to Grant's bid for a second successive triumph, finished with a 76.

Old Timers Have Their Day | Open Tourneys Lure Golfers

By BILL GRIMES

If, as they tell me, golf is a young man's game, how come Phil Hendrick, who celebrated his 61st birthday some months ago, reached the finals of the Winchester four-ball invitation?

Phil was teamed up with Stan Taylor, Oyster Harbors, the state junior titlist, but don't jump at the conclusion that he climbed aboard the youngster's back and rode around Winchester for four rounds.

True, P.A." (I'd like nothing better than to divulge what that "A" stands for, but I lack the nerve) received some [illegible] worthwhile assistance from his partner, but still the 61-year-old veteran more than held up his end

Phil Hendrick has been playing competitive golf since the good old gutta percha days. He had established himself as a golfer years before Arthur G. Lockwood appeared on the horizon.

Bill Grimes

I'm becoming suspicious of the article of golf some of these old timers are shooting. It looks to me as though Phil Hendrick and A. Linde Fowler have discovered the Fountain of Youth. Apparently, they'd both gone to seed years ago, but this season, they are playing the best golf of their careers.

You'd chase hundreds of youngsters before you'll see a better shot than Phil Hendrick pulled off at the 16th hole in his match against Judge Joseph W. Monahan and Leo Brown. Before the start of this tilt you could have written your ticket on Monahan and Brown and it was still a 10 to 1 shot that the Sandy Burr pair would win going to the 16th where they were one up.

Phil pushed his drive enough to get the ball tangled up in the pine trees to the starboard side of the 17th tee. He was in a tough spot and apparently measuring himself up for a six or seven. He was not only in the pines but he was stymied by a tree. After carefully studying the shot, Phil decided that his only hope of getting home was to aim his shot, which he did in a most masterly style. His ball went around the tree, hit the left hand lower corner of the green and ran up to within three feet of the cup. And, he holed the putt for a "Birdie" three to square the match.

At the 17th hole in this match, Phil Hendrick was the only one of the foursome home with his second and he won the hole with a par. That stunt in itself was a remarkable feat for he was with three great golfers, along with being the win which decided the match, for Stan Taylor popped up with a sensational trap shot at the home hole to halve Leo Brown and protest the one hole advantage.

Therefore whenever these middle aged golfers start to weep on your freshly laundered shirt and claim that the youngsters are sopping up all the gravy in golf, just refer them to Philip A. Hendrick, the 61-year-old veteran from Winchester, who fought his way to the finals in a big time four ball invitation tournament.

Open Tournament Players Heading For North and South Shores

The open tournament players are headed for South Shore and Rockport for the week end. The South Shore and Rockport open tournaments started this morning and will continue through tomorrow. Rockport is situated on the north side of Cape Ann, while South Shore is in West Hingham. Rockport will feature a long driving contest as an added attraction, while South Shore is operating a "Two in One" tourney, straight handicap medal play and best selected 15 holes, for those who kick away their chances of winning a prize at two or three holes.

The entries for the "Hearst" are pouring in and indications are that there'll be at least 1000 contestants in the four qualifying rounds.

Already most of the outstanding juniors of this state have entered the "Hearst" but the most encouraging feature is the number of Rhode Island youngsters who have sent in their entry blanks.

Sam Neild, Annaquetucket, the junior champion of Little Rhody, and Bill Martin, Massasoit, played in the "Hearst" a year ago but the latter because he did not know Sandy Burr, failed to qualify. Martin was a real threat until he was stymied at the 18th green.

There's only one more week to get into the "Hearst" so fill out the entry blank published daily in the Boston Evening American and mail it to 5 Winthrop square.

"Y" Enters Team In Scotch Games

The Boston Y. M. C. A. will enter a full team of athletes in the Scotch picnic and games at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, August 1, it was announced today.

Entries for the men's and women's events total 125 to date the committee declared.

Officers of French Training Ship Entertained at Marblehead

By BETTY ALDEN

THE POPULAR NEW GAME called "handies," which is a sort of modernized version of the old Indian sign language, served the girls of the North Shore in good stead last evening when they entertained the officers of the D'Entrecasteaux (the French training ship which is at the Charlestown Navy Yard for a brief visit) at the regular Thursday evening dinner dance at the Eastern Yacht Club . . .

Of course, most of the Frenchmen had enough command of English to make themselves understood in simple matters, but when the girls, who were all agog to be dancing with foreign officers in handsome uniforms, started a rapid flow of conversation, they often had to fall back on sign language to convey their meaning . . .

It was quite amusing to see a couple stop in the middle of the dance floor while a dainty miss gesticulated with her hands and said "You know what I mean, the what-do-you-call-it, or the what-ja-ma-call-it" . . .

Even if Mrs. Paul D. Rust, Jr., and Admiral and Mrs. Walter Gherardi had not extended the warm hand of North Shore hospitality and provided vivacious dancing partners for the officers, the latter would have felt very much at home just the same . . . For the atmosphere was completely nautical and similar to that of many fashionable yachting centers which they have visited in their cruises . . .

The dance was held on the wide porch of the Eastern Yacht Club, right on the edge of Marblehead bay, which was full of all sizes and shapes of yachts riding at anchor . . . As soon as the sunset gun was fired and the riding lights winked on all over the bay, the party began, and with the salty air blowing in from the water, the French blue and gold braid on white uniforms and lots of pretty girls, it might just as well have been a reception on the decks of a French destroyer . . .

Cocktail Party at Rust Home

THE RUSTS' PARTY started off early with cocktails at their house, so the officers could meet their fellow guests more informally than at the long dinner tables at the club . . . . . Mrs. Rust wore an enchanting frock of white muslin, made with a full skirt edged in a deep ruffle, a tiny peplum accenting the nipped-in waistline, and short puffed sleeves . . . . . She made good use of gardenias to fasten up several folds in her full skirt to prevent it from trailing on the floor when she danced, and also another cluster was pinned in her curls to keep them in place . . . . .

Some of the others invited to meet the officers, were of course Admiral and Mrs. Gherardi, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eliot Ware, Jr., and their post-deb daughter, "Sister" . . . . . The latter and Betsy Shrigley seemed to be doing pretty well in keeping up a steady flow of conversation with the visitors . . . . . Betsy wore a Parisian looking model of raspberry taffeta with a sort of fischu of turquoise taffeta forming a deep V at the back . . .

The dinner dance was also a celebration in honor of Mary Markle Bannard Pierce's birthday . . . . . Her bridegroom, Wallie Pierce, arranged a festive table all unbeknownst to her, and she had eighteen guests to help her cut her birthday cake . . . . . She was literally showered with gardenias which made a perfect contrast with her fluffy black net gown . . . . Dining with them were the George Creightons, the former Mary Brown wearing a pale blue dress and short printed jacket, the tiny bows in her hair repeating the blue of her frock . . . . . Lucilie Swift and Phil Tucker sat opposite Dottie Pierce and also drinking a toast to the hostess was Don Fitzpatrick . . . .

Mrs. Catharine C. Choate wore a pale pink gown and turquoise gloves to match her turquoise necklace, and when she danced with an officer she seemed almost hesitant to rest her hand on his shoulder for fear of mussing his snowy white uniform . . . . . Mrs. George Dunclee, who takes such an interest in the affairs of the Charlotte Cushman Club, chose a ringside table for her guests so they could watch the dancing . . . . . With her violet lace gown Mrs. Dunclee wore a purple velvet wrap to ward off the cool breeze . . . . . We could go on ad infinitum telling you who was there, but we covered the activities at another yacht club yesterday, too . . . . . .

Carnival at Manchester Yacht Club

THOUGH WE ARE not a student of evolution it seems to us that the members of society's sporting group go through definite stages of progress . . . When they are just four or five they are boosted up onto a horse, or cling to the tiller of a racing yacht, and learn all the elements of various sports so quickly that they are experts by the time they reach their early teens . . .

From then until they are married they take active participation in all sorts of competition . . . Then, with the arrival of a family, they gradually become less and less active until their chief interest in sports is sitting in a gallery to watch their own youngsters courageously struggling through the learning phase, to repeat the cycle all over again . . .

Most of those who gathered on the veranda of the Manchester Yacht Club yesterday afternoon to view the water sports carnival, will tell you that the spectator's stage is the most enjoyable because they get a big kick out of watching their youngsters winning prizes and cups and gradually becoming more and more skilled in various sports . . .

Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean has six children and, though one is married and there's a post deb as well as a deb in the family, she still has several left to guide through the cup winning stage . . . Yesterday she kept records of the winners and helped Gerald Boardman give out the prizes at the little informal gathering inside the clubhouse where everyone gathered for tea and a bit of shelter from the squally wind as soon as the events were over . . . Her little daughter, Polly, added a silver cup to the family's collection while the youngest McKean's, Florence and Henry, Jr., clung to mother and secretly hoped they could indulge in the canoe tilting contest, some day.

Augustus Lowell Putnams Attend

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS' grandchild enjoyed two sports at once as he watched the carnival and rode side saddle on his mother's hip . . . Mrs. Charlie Adams, Jr., carried him all around until photographers began to seek pictures of the ex-Secretary of the Navy's grandchild . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Lowell Putnam even wore yachting outfits for the event though their only participation was in watching their daughter in the swimming meet . . . Olivia Russell and Louise Harding have deserted the Cape for a brief visit with the former's aunt, Mrs. William E. Russell, on the North Shore and were right on hand to cheer for their hostess's son who performed some difficult aquatic feats . . .

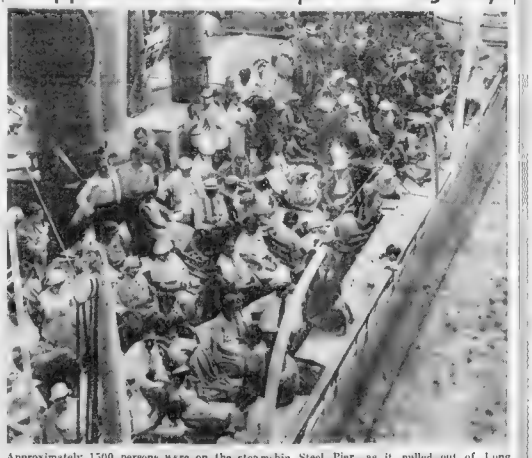
Clipped American Coupons for Big Day



Approximately 1500 persons were on the steamship Steel Pier, as it pulled out of Long Wharf. Most of the people on board were there via the coupon route—said coupon being clipped from the Boston Evening American. It meant that adults enjoyed the trip for $1, while children paid 50 cents for the ticket. It was a happy group that had a great day for a small price due to the Boston Evening American with the co-operation of the steamship owners.

Adventurer Faces Death on Top Of Burning Oil Tank

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Gather 'round the soda fountain, boys and girls. Mike Foley is standing treat. Mike lives in Jackson Heights, N. Y., and he's going to treat us to a swell yarn. Mike's an old hand at this treating business. He was doing it professionally as far back as June, 1881—the month and year in which he had his big adventure. But don't get the idea that Mike went around handing out ten-cent cigars like a fellow that's trying to be elected alderman. Not on your life. Mike was an OIL treater—one of the lads who processed kerosene so it could be burned in lamps. And a mighty dangerous job that was, too.

Mike worked for the Standard Oil Company at a big refinery and storage yard that was then located in Long Island City. The tanks in which the oil was treated and on which Mike worked were huge affairs, 20 feet in diameter and 50 or more feet high. You got to the top of them by wooden stairways. And up the side of each tank ran a pair of six-inch pipes that carried the chemicals with which the oil was treated.

Well, so, to get down to the story. Mike here was up on the top of one of the big tanks going to examine a good, rough treating. Part of that process—and a very compressed air through the oil and that was often a messy procedure. Oil would slop over the side of the tank and eat away the wooden staircase. That was not always so, but danger was as subsequent events amply demonstrated.

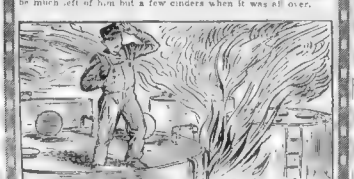
A thunder storm was brewing while Mike was made under cover of the tank's shelter top. The storm broke about quarter after two in the afternoon, and about 2:30 he heard a loud crack. Lightning! It had struck the tank.

Mike's two bosses had gone to the office to give in their reports. Mike was all alone in the tank, so it was up to him. He ran out from under the shelter-roof to see what had happened. The lightning had struck all right. The oil-soaked, wooden stairs were on fire. The blaze, starting apparently from the top, had spread down four or five steps by the time Mike got there.

There was one thing that had to be done, then—done mighty quickly, too. Around the top of the tank were five trap doors, wide open to let out the gases that formed in the tank during treatments. Those doors had to be closed before the fire got through them and the whole tank went up in flames.

Mike dashed for the doors. He got one closed—then another. At that point he turned and took a look at the burning stairway. The flames had spread down four or five more steps. The fire was blazing with even greater fury.

And that wasn't all that was worrying Mike, either. Any minute now—doors or no doors—the tank might take fire and go up with a big WHOOSH! And where would that leave Mike? Not much of anywhere, to tell the truth about it. Just let that tank get going good, and Mike would be trapped. There wouldn't be much left of him but a few cinders when it was all over.



I [illegible] put new energy in him. He got the next three doors [illegible] and then he went back to the stairway that was [illegible] escape.

But when Mike got to the stairway he stopped. No use trying to get down there. Not only the whole stairway, but likewise the platform leading to it, was a roaring inferno of flame. The timbers that supported the platform were burning through, by the blaze. If Mike wanted to get down that way down, he'd be left in a fair way to [illegible] bricks and rock and [illegible] crashing to earth.

"So there I stood," says Mike, "45 feet from the ground, like young Casabianca—the boy who stood on the burning deck. A crowd had gathered down below, and about 800 men who worked in the loading sheds near the dock were willing to me to jump. I didn't want to do that—it would have been almost as bad as burning to death. Still, I couldn't stay up there, either. Most any minute that tank might go up with a roar—and take me along with it."

It looked pretty bad for Mike—but he still had a trick or two up his sleeve. "At that time," he says, "I was a member of the Star Athletic Club of Long Island City, and I was pretty good on the flying rings. So I swung over the edge of the platform."

What followed after that [illegible] down below. Like a circus [illegible], high over head, [illegible] along horse [illegible] on the braces that held them. [illegible] had traveled eight or 10 feet around the side [illegible] bottom the spectators saw what he was [illegible] each other as Mike reached one of the six-inch pipes that ran up the side of the tank and began sliding to safety.

"That pipe was so close to the tank," says Mike, "that I couldn't put my legs around it. I had to grip it with my knees and slide down in jerks about two inches at a time. But I got down all right except for some skin I lost off my hands, and a new pair of pants I had to buy to replace the ones I was wearing. They were ruined."

Well, sir, Mike ended [illegible] under the wire from a [illegible] and the [illegible] then ran down [illegible] same way.

Rivalry of Two Cities Will Be Film Plot

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 24—Leave it to the Warners to think up amusing ideas for that great galaxy of musical talent which is under contract to the studio! The brothers have always been especially successful in this field, and the picture now planned promises to pale all past performances. The plot was suggested to Hal Wallis by the Fort Worth-Dallas centennial feuding and will center about the rivalry of two cities.

Each will be shown in the throes of striving to import a big Broadway show for the town fair, and this, as you see, will serve to introduce Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and that sensational newcomer, handsome songster, Leo Dixon, who is really going places in pictures.

The palatial William Powell mansion, with its gold door knobs and platinum bathrooms, has been sold. Bill has disposed of this much-publicized palace to a non-film millionaire whose name is being kept secret for the time being. Now he has the laugh on all those who kidded him for spending most of his fortune on this investment.

Bill is beginning a new regime in other ways as well. He will make a shift from sleuth roles to that celebrated crook character Arsene Lupin, the French Raffles created by Maurice Le Blanc. None other than Spencer Tracy will be the representative of the law's long arm in the movie, which is now being prepared by Detective Writer George Harmon Coxe and our old friend, Erich von Stroheim.

If planes from the East arrive on schedule, Director Al Santell will "let 'em roll" on "Winterset" at once. With Lionel Barrymore bowing out, Edward Ellis is airbound from Wisconsin for the Judge Gaunt role created by Richard Bennett with such finesse on the stage. Stanley Ridges comes from Gotham to be Shadow on the screen, and after seeing a test described as "electrifying," RKO filmguils have summoned Paul Guilfoyle from behind New York footlights for the part of Garth.

Chatter in Hollywood: John Boles' bread upon the waters came back to him in the shape of three thoroughbred polo ponies and this is how it happened. John was appearing in Oklahoma City and was asked by Dan Hunter, Oklahoma oil millionaire, to call on his little boy, who was desperately ill in a local hospital. John went not only once but three times to visit the youngster, who is now hale and hearty. So the father, to show his gratitude, sent John this magnificent gift.

Rumors do start in Hollywood even when there isn't a semblance of truth. One of these rumors was that Miriam Hopkins would buy her contract from the Goldwyn Company and remain in England. This gossip has been completely refuted by Goldwyn, who last week purchased "Angels Making Music," an unpublished story by Ferenc Molnar. Miriam returns to American picture-making early in September and she probably will make "The Princess and the Pauper" before the Molnar fable.

Snapshots of Hollywood:

The whole town is talking about JACK DUNN'S thunderous skater's infatuation for KETTI GALLIAN; KAY FRANCIS fastening dry ice in front of an electric fan and creating a frost fit of cool air on her set; GEORGE STONE leaving shortly for England to play in Warner Brothers' pictures on the other side; JANE WYATT who has been nursing her husband, EDGAR B. WARD, back to health at Yosemite, leaving his bedside for Universal—the show must go on and Jane has the lead in "The Luckiest Girl in the World"; JULIE HAYDON of "Scoundrel" fame signed on a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; BILL FIELDS getting his trailer in readiness so he can do some more travelling when he feels better. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Thrills Pack Smuggling Film

By MARION FRENCH

Shirley Temple will be the drawing card this week for the younger generation at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters, where "Poor Little Rich Girl," her latest film, is being shown.

For the adults there is "Border Flight," a pretty exciting picture, which has to do with love and battles between the flying coast guard and smugglers. Frances Farmer, John Howard, Roscoe Karns, Robert Cummings, Grant Withers and Samuel Hinds are the players who take part in this affair.

Frances Farmer, incidentally one of the cutest of the movie gals, has the only feminine role in "Border Flight." Both John Howard and Grant Withers, seen as buddies of the air corps, are in love with her. Withers gets into trouble because of his "stunting" in the air and in a huff joins forces with the smugglers.

Miss Farmer still believes in her navy friend, as does her fiance, Mr. Howard, despite the fact that appearances are against him. She and Withers go for a spin his car and are kidnaped by the smugglers and tied up in a shack on the beach.

* * *

Howard comes to the rescue in his plane, which is soon riddled with bullets by the public enemies of the coast. A terrific battle takes place between the two aviators and the smugglers, who have more machine guns on board their little boat than any ordinary screen gangsters we ever saw. And the navy boys answer them right back with many a volley from their own weapons.

Withers turns hero at the fade-out, providing a thrilling and stirring ending to the film. It's good to see Mr. Withers again, incidentally. This fine looking actor has been absent from pictures quite a while, but we hope he continues in the business now and does as well as he did a few years back.

* * *

As always, Shirley Temple delights her audiences in "Poor Little Rich Girl." The story with which this film is concerned is a light and flimsy little thing, but gives little Miss Temple plenty of opportunities to sing, dance and look her sweetest, which is all right with us. The popular and attractive Michael Whalen plays Shirley's papa, and Alice Faye, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley and Claude Gillingwater comprise the very fine cast supporting little Shirley.

'Pastures' At Met

"The Green Pastures," picturization of Marc Connelly's Pulitzer prize-winning play, opens today at the Metropolitan Theater.

The wizardry of the camera has reproduced this comedy of the Negroes of the South's quaint conception of biblical incidents with great artistry, according to reports. The picture is said to assume gigantic proportions and has over 1000 actors in its cast with the famous Hall Johnson Choir of 100 voices rendering 25 spirituals.

The stage show at this house is a revue entitled "Varieties" which feature Charles Withers and his comedy skit, "Withers Opry" The Three Deweys, Carter and Holmes, Paul Duke and the Balabanow Revue.

Newspaper Ads Credited in Boom

"Sales for June 1936 as compared with the sales of June 1935 show an increase of over 30 per cent," Rogal said. "Individual sales also show a 40 per cent rise for the same periods.

"This advance was made largely as a result of our confidence in the general business future of the country. We have continually expanded and have constantly increased our advertising expenditures, particularly in the newspapers."

Wilderness Thrills on Screen

By MARION FRENCH

Although we think Michael Whalen one of the most romantic of all screen heroes and admire Jean Muir, very much, all acting honors must go to Lightning, the mighty wolf-dog, who plays the title role in "White Fang," new picture at Keith's Memorial Theater in which this couple is featured.

"White Fang" is the sequel to "The Call of the Wild," made from Jack London's story and its plot is similar to its successor. Whalen is seen as an adventurer who meets a gal and her brother in Alaska and gets himself into a peck of trouble when he agrees to guide the boy to a gold mine inheritance in the Klondike Wilds.

Jean Muir plays the part of the nice blonde sister whom Whalen sends back to civilization before setting out on his perilous journey with her brother. While on the trail, winter sets in, Whalen's companion goes mad, and ends his life. His guide loses consciousness and is rescued from a savage wolf-pack by a magnificent dog, "White Fang," who is half dog and half wolf.

Later in a remote settlement where Whalen has recovered his health, due to the care of Jane Darwell and Charles Winninger, cast as an old doctor who loves his liquor, he is able to repay White Fang for his kindness. The handsome guide rescues his canine friend from a pit fight with a bull dog in which the "white wolf" is about to get the worst.

Complications arise for Whalen when Miss Muir arrives to see her brother and claim her share of the gold mine of which he has taken possession to outwit a local bad man who had designs on it. The latter hasn't cared very much for Whalen since he prevented White Fang from finishing his fight, which was staged for the amusement of his low type friends, and he tries to turn Jean against him for inferring that her brother was slain by his guide.

* * *

A near hanging takes place in this wilderness with Whalen as the guest of honor, but again White Fang shows his loyalty and saves his friend's own hide. Muir who by this time has learned to care a good deal for the lad and doesn't care who knows it.

* * *

"Easy Money," the other picture at this house, has to do with the expose of an accident insurance racket ring. It has Onslow Stevens, Kay Linker, Noel Madison, Allan Vincent and Barbara Barondess in its cast and they all do good work in this fast moving and exciting little picture.

A Bishop's Wisdom

BISHOP MICHAEL J. GALLAGHER, of Detroit, the 70-year-old prelate of the Catholic Church, struck some telling blows at Communism and for SOUND AMERICAN PRINCIPLES before he sailed for Europe.

The Bishop said:

"COMMUNISM MUST BE HEADED OFF. IT IS BASED ON ATHEISM, THE SUBVERSION OF HUMAN RIGHTS AND THE DESTRUCTION OF PRIVATE PROPERTY. WE WANT TO KEEP OUR AMERICAN FORM OF CIVILIZATION, WHICH WE RIGHTFULLY THINK IS THE GREATEST IN THE WORLD.

"SEE WHAT COMMUNISM HAS DONE TO RUSSIA AND WHAT IT IS DOING TO SPAIN AND OTHER COUNTRIES. ALL ARE ON THEIR WAY TO DESTRUCTION. FRANCE IS ON THE VERGE."

BISHOP GALLAGHER, like the majority of sound-thinking Americans, knows that far worse even than the disturbances that a violent Leftist swing would cause here would be the attempt of the extreme radicals to abrogate OUR RELIGIOUS AND CIVIL LIBERTIES.

The liberties guaranteed to us in Article I of the Bill of Rights are inimical IN ESSENCE AND IN WORDS to all that Communism stands for.

Bishop Gallagher's warning should be heeded and taken to heart by all Americans before the disasters that have fallen on France and Spain cross the Atlantic Ocean.

It Won't Be Repeated

ROBERT L. JOHNSON, president of the National Civil Service Reform League, urges that the 810,000 members of the Federal service be prohibited from contributing to any political campaign fund.

He further condemns the policy of making political chiefs—like Farley, for instance—head of the Post Office Department.

To this end Mr. Johnson urges a law be passed that no postmaster general shall hereafter be permitted to hold a political office during his term of office.

Both of these recommendations will receive the approval of that vast majority of our people who are neither recipients of the Roosevelt bounties nor political postmasters—but who are simply TAXPAYERS and WORKERS.

To allow the Postmaster General of the United States—or any other government official—to hold a political position while he is exercising the duties of his office ENDANGERS THE VERY LIFE OF OUR DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS.

"The time has come," says Mr. Johnson, "for the public to insist that the building up of a political machine with the postmaster-general as the spearhead be not repeated in this country."

IT WILL NOT BE REPEATED when Alfred M. Landon becomes President, because his record shows a complete divorce of the sense of public obligation from POLITICAL FENCE-BUILDING.

The Housewife Pays

Every woman should study this picture.

It shows a housewife buying meat from a butcher. She has just made a purchase for her family and has complained that the price is high.

There are ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-THREE TAXES PILED ON YOUR MEAT.

And no matter how small the tax is, YOU pay it, for at every stage, from pasture to table, the tax is added to the cost. It is passed along to YOU, and when you pay it, the Government collects it.

Your high taxes enable the New Deal to spend billions. And don't you ever forget it.

Woman, purchasing agent for the family, should know that one-third of the money she pays for meat is just velvet for the boondoggiers. It represents her personal and her family's contribution to a wasteful, money-mad Administration.

November is approaching. Then, woman will have her say.

"You amaze me, Professor, I'd hardly suppose
I'd see such phenomena, ever!
Yet you balance an eel on the end of your nose!
What makes you so awfully clever?"
"It's a trick," said the Prof., "and it once again shows
What conjurers seldom deny.

I refer to the oft-noted fact that the nose
Is quicker, by far, than the eye!"
"Don't ask any questions regarding the feat,
Or gape when the eel doesn't fall.
It's purely illusion, the eyesight's deceit—
The thing isn't balanced at all!"

This "Jumpy" World

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

This old world is getting jumpy. We have two spy cases here, an enlisted man in the Navy being convicted of selling secrets to Japan and a former officer arrested on a similar charge.

Edwin C. Hill

England rears up to question the passage of the dirigible Hindenburg over some of its defense areas, intimating the Germans were spying on her fortifications, which is promptly denied by Captain Eckener.

A few weeks ago in the House of Commons the activities of the Gestapo, which is short for the German words for State Secret Police were debated. One of Goering's agents convicted in Switzerland of kidnaping an anti-Nazi across the border into Germany, testified that he had operated in England and has used the diplomatic mailbag to send home his reports.

Meanwhile every nation is arming to the teeth. The Japanese army came through the other day with a demand for 4852,000,000 for the next six years. That is a terrific sum in Japan, where it will go about five times as far as it would in the United States.

BRITAIN PREPARES

To get back to England, John Bull has adopted the Napoleonic principle of "trusting in God but keeping the powder dry." While striving desperately to bring about an understanding of the powers, England has launched a three-year program to make her tight little isle a fortress that will defy attack by air or sea.

Some idea of how well-informed Englishmen are thinking may be gathered from the remarks of J. L. Garvin, the far-seeing publicist who has made a name for himself by his uncanny foresight into the political future. Garvin wants England to make a settlement immediately of its war debt to the United States. He tells his countrymen:

"We have one asset which is unrivalled on this side of the Atlantic. It is our financial power. We would use it to the full. We are convinced a reasonable arrangement could be made in Washington."

The turn to the left in France is not at all pleasing to England and in the end it may be the one thing that would keep England out of a European war should such a catastrophe come within a short space of time.

A LESSON FOR US

The lineup over there today is Fascism against Communism, and England isn't blinking at that fact. Germany and Italy have dictatorships of the Right, Russia has a dictatorship of the Left, and it will take everything that France has to prevent a civil war which shall decide which way her form shall go. At present it is Leftist. No statesman or group of statesmen can reconcile the Left and the Right. They just won't jell.

Russia believes that Germany, through its alliance with Austria and a reputed understanding with Italy, is solidifying her front for whatever comes.

Today it is Germany and Italy against Russia and France, England is between, trying to act the umpire and hoping to keep out of a war if it should come. As Lord Lothian said, crisis after crisis is coming up, practically one a month—Ethiopia, the Rhine, Austria, Danzig and what not.

England will have 4000 more fighting airplanes by next March. Nine hundred industrial plants have been made ready to begin the manufacture of munitions at a moment's notice and food supplies are being stored up in the cities.

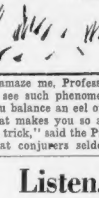
Let us take a lesson from England and be prepared not only to keep out of it, but above all to thwart any and all efforts which would bring us into it.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson



Elsie Robinson

The Browns are battling. Over one of those pesky problems created by the "Sex-Equality Age"—a problem which is raising riots in many a home:

Should husbands and wives work in teams?

The Browns are young, bright, devoted and ambitious. There are no little Browns as yet, and time hangs heavy on pretty Ella's hands. Ed Brown's in the insurance business. Does most of his work by personal visits, driving around in the car or making overnight trips. So why can't Ella go along?

"Because wives and business don't mix!" says Ed, vehemently. "A man who's got to carry his wife around with him soon loses his standing with the other fellows. They get to thinking that he isn't regular . . . is a sort of sissy. Men don't feel at ease with a woman around, not when they're doing business. She cramps their style.

"Besides, customers don't like to discuss their affairs before a third party. They feel you're not showing them the right consideration if you let someone else listen in—even if it is your wife. People are funny that way, the least little thing may spoil a good prospect."

All of which, according to the exasperated Ella, is old-fashioned nonsense.

"You know perfectly well, Ed Brown, that I could be a wonderful help if you'd let me come along. The only time I'd cramp your style is when you men want to go off on a wild time and that sort of thing ought to be cramped. The rest of the time I'd be as good, if not better, than any man.

"Everyone knows that a woman's judgment is better than a man's . . . because of her feminine 'instinct.' Remember the time I advised you not to buy those water bonds and you went right ahead 'n' lost all that money.

"Yes, remember them," responds Ed with plenty heat. "They're usually untrained—and do sloppy work. And nine times out of ten they start more trouble'n waste more time than a dozen stenogs would in a year. If the husband could call them for it, it might be okay. But he can't. She's his wife.

"If he starts to treat her like a regular office girl, she gets all 'burned up' and reminds him of 'all she's done for him'—and how she's 'carrying a double load' and what an ungrateful dog he is to complain."

EACH H'S OPINION

But Ella "denies these allegations and defies the allegator," still insisting that "feminine instinct" is a No. 1 business asset—worth any amount of commercial training or experience—and any man with sense could take his wife into the firm and profit by her superior jud'ment.

But Ed still denies the value of the Dear Little Woman's touch in the office and vows that no two wedded hearts shall ever "beat as one" on his job.

And there you have the makings of as lively a modern tangle as ever ended in jeers and kisses . . . a tangle in which you've long since taken one side or the other. So let's hear which—the world is listening.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Helen Rowland

When a man returns from a political convention, with a sore throat and a four days' headache, and finds his wife waiting with sympathy and an ice-bag he is more than ever convinced that a "woman's place is in the home."

There are some men to whom getting married is like taking the mule-trail down Grand Canyon. They may be glad that they did it once, but they could never be tempted to try it again.

A woman may forgive another woman for trying to steal her job, her laurels or even her cook; but she will never forgive her for trying to steal her MAN—no matter how pleased she would be to get rid of him.

If takes only a year or so for a baby to get hair and learn to talk; but it sometimes takes him forty years to learn to keep still—and even longer to convince himself that nothing will make his hair grow again.

A self-effacing wife, like the soldier who dies in action, may eventually receive a lot of tributes; but she is never there to hear the cheers and enjoy the flowers.

When a woman sees her husband hanging heavily she can never be sure whether he has just heard a funny story—or just told one.

The average bridegroom goes into matrimony as he came into the world; just a helpless, bewildered creature with a lot of habits which have to be broken.

A man never can understand why a woman who is an angel about forgiving, is such an ELEPHANT about never forgetting.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 24—Thoughts while strolling: That sidewalk knot that awaits every morning to see Al Smith arrive at the Empire. Smilingest faces in the rumble seats. The Manbridge Building on 34th street where I had my first New York office. And my name on the door. For two whole weeks!

Down stairs was John J. McGraw's pool parlors where Willie Hoppe used to practice. And at night the Herald presses roared and the green-eyed cornice owls blinked. Siren's Utopia: A Jap chauffeur and a chinchilla coat. Bill Robinson certainly did a grand job of teaching Shirley Temple to tap.

One word description of the Atlantic Ocean: Big. Nice of Ted Kiley to pass along that Ernest Hemingway trade last. Nothing whoops up a writer like a back pat. Unless it is an editor's postscript: "The jump in your check was for turning in a swell performance." That's Nirvana!

Physiological puzzle: Buff Cobb looks like Irvin, yet is a beauty. Ben Bernie Brady buys a new hat, that's news. The town is certainly going Longchamps, Red Cavaniing everywhere.

I always mix up Edmund Goulding and Louis Golding. Those burnt black seashore boys with the coffee brown shirts and snow-white four-in-hands. As Grandma Archer would say, "Fish." Tony Biddle's gates-ajar collars. What became of cigaret finger stains. Happy Landon!

The intricacies of managing big hotels have fascinated me. My pet loafing places are the big inns just to see things tick. Few books have fascinated me like Arnold Bennett's "Imperial Palace," which followed his months of intimate study of the Savoy in London.

The Savoy's manager director, Reeves-Smith, is likely the supreme hotel genius of the world. And yet the least known. I know people who have resided at the Savoy on and off for years but never laid eyes on him.

Men with the fame of Ritz and Escoffier were mere employes of his, whose genius he recognized in nascent stage and burgeoned into full flower.

Reeves-Smith has had 40 years of hotel management, looking out over two great big London hotels aside from the Savoy. He permits no personal publicity to go out about him. He eats in a private east room. Among his duties, which he will delegate to no one else, is personal supervision of the vast Savoy wine cellars, containing $3,000,000 worth of rare vintages and extending under the Thames.

That's That

A child who has been burned is supposed to dread the fire. But that theory is not supposed to apply to nations. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, home from a European trip, says "The power of many governments to borrow probably will be ended during 1937" and thinks "The United States, as the world's greatest creditor nation, should take the lead and without delay call an international conference before the power of the governments to raise credit is ended."

The sensible policy for the United States is to attend to its own business and quit trying to save the whole world. The best way for us to help other nations is by putting our own house in order. We got into the World War to make the world safe for democracy. But the actual result was to set in motion forces which have driven democracy out of most of the world.

Our last experience playing Santa Claus to Europe should have taught us a lesson. We restored the credit of European nations, loaned them billions of dollars at ridiculously low interest rates, and they showed their gratitude by repudiating those debts and refusing to make any effort to pay either interest or principal. They have no credit standing with the United States now. If their domestic credit is sagging, that is their worry, not ours.

Dr. Butler may be painting too black a picture of the European credit situation. All those nations over there seem to be able to raise whatever money they need for armaments and munitions of war. There is no advantage to us in lending them money to buy more of our goods. We have had experience with that kind of false prosperity. We found out we couldn't get rich by lending money to international deadbeats to purchase our products.

One thing our politicians do is take care of one another. A congressional "big shot" may be out, but he is never down. If he fails to get back into the Senate or the House and the people refuse to elect him to any other office, he is certain to be taken care of with a nice soft berth. Down in Mississippi, Senator Pat Harrison, one of the administration wheelhorses, is facing strong opposition for renomination. If he loses out, according to reports from Washington, President Roosevelt will appoint him Comptroller-General. The job is being held open until after the primary.

At Joplin, Mo., lead miners have quit work until the mines warm up. The report is that the air in the mines gets colder as the temperature rises at the surface. Meteorologists say they cannot understand how an increase in surface temperature can lower temperatures in underground workings. Usually mine temperatures are approximately constant. It is only by comparison that a mine seems colder in blistering hot weather.

According to American Federation of Labor figures, there are still more than 11,000,000 unemployed in the United States. And that is the situation after "three long years" of New Deal experimentation and squandering of billions and billions of dollars. The fact is that the New Deal policy of scarcity has increased and perpetuated unemployment.

Congressman Andresen of Minnesota estimated the production and processing of the agricultural products imported into the United States last year from foreign lands would have given employment to three million Americans if those products had been raised in the United States. He says prominent labor leaders have stated that "If it were not for the imports of cheaply produced competitive manufactured products now coming into this country there could be gainfully employed in private industry nearly three million persons who are now out of work and on relief. THIS MAKES A TOTAL OF NEARLY SIX MILLION AMERICANS WHO WOULD HAVE WORK IF THE NEW DEAL WOULD SAVE THE HOME MARKET FOR AMERICAN FARMERS AND AMERICAN LABORING MEN."

Presidential Candidate Lemke of the New Union Party may not get much ice in this campaign, so far as the number of electoral votes he wins is concerned, but he will influence many thousands of people to vote against President Roosevelt. That was a lusty blow he dealt the New Deal Administration when he said:

"We no longer have representative government. Due to a corrupt patronage system, your Congressmen no longer write the laws. They are prepared by a brainless trust, not one of whom could have been elected to office."

The continued success of the American dancer, Dorothy Dickson, on the London stage, incidentally, is one of the histrionic wonders of Albion. Miss Dickson, whose parents still live on Staten Island, flowered with that amazing crop that produced Florence Walton and so many floating gazelles of that day.

Most of her contemporaries have either married or gone to Hollywood to essay bit roles. But Miss Dickson is still the agile dancing, singing star of the musical revue, as vibrant with health and dewey freshness as 20 years ago. Her daughter, too, has been a London stage favorite.

Miss Dickson's devotion to her parents recalls Edna Ferber's story, "Show Boat," which cooled a long and warm friendship between Elsie Janis, the delightful impersonator of types of the tale, and Miss Ferber. Miss Janis and her mother lived next door.

All of which brings to mind the successful people of the stage who have been in a measure "tied to mother's apron strings." I think offhand of Ina Claire, Clifton Webb, Marion Davies, Mary Pickford, Fred and Adele Astaire, Constance and Norma Talmadge, Ginger Rogers, Jane Sanderson, Billy Gaxton, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the Gish girls and Norma Shearer.
